Canal charges jump

Rates double in two years in Twin Falls

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

Water season nearing end

TWIN FALLS — The beginning of the end of the Twin Falls Canal Co. water season is coming.

On Oct. 25, the gates from Milner Dam into the canal system will be closed. Canal company shareholders can receive water until at least Nov. 1, said Warren Travis, the canal company manager. Shareholders near the end of the system, in Bull or Castleford, will probably have water until Nov. 4, he said.

The water season will begin again in March, Travis said.

In the meantime, he hopes for dry weather after the water is out of the canal so it can dry out in time for its scheduled winter maintenance.

have to consider in the past we lived off reserves for three or four years," he said. "Our biggest problem we're facing is trying to play catch-up at a time where you're faced with so much tremendous inflation," said Warren Travis, the canal company manager.

"When I came here, the emergency fund they had was gone," he said. "We have been striving to put some money back in that. In the 1981 budget, we failed. Hopefully this year, we'll be able to set aside some money for use in an emergency."

Travis came to the canal company about a year and a half ago. He was expected not just to maintain the canal but to upgrade it.

Much of the money raised with last year's rate increase was used to buy equipment and pay for increased maintenance on the canal system.

"I feel we've made some great strides forward," Travis said.

But trying to do all of the repair work for a more than 75-year-old system is expensive.

Equipment repairs cost more than Travis anticipated. "Repairs were extremely expensive," he said. "It was a disaster as far as our herbicides and aquatic weed controls. Prices increased far beyond my expectations."

thing we can do to improve conditions, we want to do it."

From Bunker Hill, Watt motored to the United Steelworkers of America union hall in downtown Kellogg to answer questions from about 50 people who assembled to hear him.

Watt was scheduled to address a Friday night banquet of the Republican Western States Conference in nearby Coeur D'Alene.

Union officials stressed that time is running out for the smelter, which is due close in November because of continued economic troubles.

Watt acknowledged the problem, but did not offer any solutions during his brief 20-minute appearance at the union hall.

Instead, he took the opportunity to attack his critics.

"We'll go down to Coeur D'Alene and there'll be a bunch of people and they'll be screaming 'Dump Watt,' with little regard for jobs and little regard for national security," the secretary said.

"I have to put up with that taunting abuse from people who don't care about your jobs," he said. "Sometimes it makes me sick."

Watt said he has seen signs throughout the West that the federal government has mismanaged the nation's resources and that it's time for a change.

"I hope we can recover from our economic decisions of the past," he said. "We'll protect the environment, but we'll create jobs."

McClure, Symms blast silver sale

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — A General Accounting Office study on this week's sale of silver from the national stockpile shows the federal government lost at least $40,000 on the first day of the offering.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, who joined with other Idaho officials in an unsuccessful fight against the first phase of the sale Wednesday, revealed the report Friday.

Presidential consultants of the GAO inquiry are giving opponents of the program "the facts on which we can call nationwide attention to this degradation of our strategic mineral needs, and the rip-off of the taxpayer," McClure said.

The report, he said, raises serious questions as to whether the federal government protected the best interests of its citizens by striking the best deal possible in unloading 150,000 troy ounces of silver Wednesday.

McClure said the silver might have been sold at below-market prices.

"Preliminary study results indicate the U.S. Government is not receiving what it should from the silver sale, and that the government lost about $40,000 on just the first day of the sale," said the senator — who was attending the Western States Republican Conference in Coeur D'Alene.

Idaho's other Senator, Republican Steve Symms, also opposes the sale.

"The current sale is being done in the name of strategic policy, but the real motive is budgetary," Symms said. "Let's be honest, the depressed silver market was just one contributing factor in the failure of Bunker Hill Co. Halting the silver sale will not solve the Bunker Hill problem completely. The market will absorb the silver sale."

McClure said conclusions of the study "are damning to the silver sale, to the method being used to sell the silver, and to the criteria on which the sale is justified."

Among the findings of GAO were several indictments of the information-gathering process used to make a final decision on the sale, he said.

Those included claims that GAO identified demands for silver during national emergencies which were not considered; that the agency's effort to pin down the domestic and foreign supply of silver were ignored; and that data used to support the sale was "extremely soft."

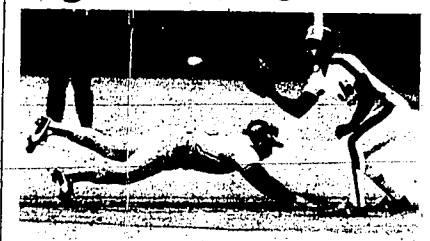

McClure also said the sale has raised the anger of major foreign suppliers of silver, including Peru, Mexico and Canada. He said each of those governments lodged a protest with the United States when the sale plan was announced.

Israel's soldier-statesman Dayan dies

Analysis on A3

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Moshe Dayan, the soldier-statesman whose defiant pride and famous eye patch made him a symbol of Israel to the world, died of a heart attack Friday night, his family said. He was 66.

Dayan, who led the Israeli army to victory in the 1967 Six-Day War and helped forge the Camp David peace agreement with Egypt, died in Tel Aviv's El Hashomer hospital, his daughter Yael said.

He had been admitted to the hospital the night before, complaining of chest pains and difficulty in breathing.

Israel's foreign minister until October 1979 and still a member of Knesset, Dayan's death took Israelis completely by surprise, shocking a nation already shaken by the assassination 10 days earlier of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Even shortly after his death, Israel television was quoted the acting director of the Tel Hashomer, Dr. Boleslaw Goldman, as saying Dayan's condition had "improved significantly" during the day.

But Israeli radio said Dayan began having trouble breathing during the afternoon and doctors fought for several hours to save his life.

The government said Dayan, who died with his wife Rachel and daughter Yael at his side, will be buried at a state funeral Sunday.

In its first reaction to Dayan's death, Egypt praised him as a man who "believed that peaceful co-existence between Israel and the Palestinian people is possible."

"Dayan played an important role in the negotiations between Egypt and Israel and made positive contributions that made the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty (of 1979) possible," said Butros Ghali, State Minister for Foreign Affairs.

President Reagan said in Washington that "Dayan provided his nation with military leadership that was the envy of the world. His bold strategies brought him victory on the battle field and respect from friend and foe alike."

But peace, said Reagan, "after all was the cause of Moshe Dayan."

"Dayan still represented the first generation of those who fought for and built up the state of Israel," said Uri Porath, a spokesman for Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

In an article he wrote for Friday's edition of the newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth, urged Israel to remain committed to its peace treaty with Egypt after the death of President Anwar Sadat.

"The agreement should be stuck to and not allowed to fall," he said.

Dayan was considered a moderating influence on Begin's last hardline Cabinet, especially in the negotiations for a future self-rule plan for the Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Dr. Goldman said Dayan was apparently not suffering from a heart attack when he was admitted to the intensive cardiac care unit of the hospital after dinner Thursday night.

He said Dayan spent the day reading and listening to the radio as he waited for the result of his hospital tests to arrive.

Although he had no previous history of heart trouble, Dayan had been in poor health since an operation for intestinal cancer in June, 1979.

According to a friend, Dayan once said he knew he was "loved, admired and hated by the people" but hoped that when he died people would remember his "contribution to the modern history of the state of Israel."

Born a native Palestinian, Moshe Dayan fought in all of Israel's four wars. He became a national hero in one of them by leading Israeli forces to victory in just six days in June of 1967.

Schools lack funds, shut doors

ALPENA, Mich. (UPI) — Gloom and uncertainty prevailed Friday in the public schools around Alpena, the first district in Michigan to close for lack of operating funds since the Depression.

School officials closed the district's 14 schools at the end of the day for at least two weeks — longer if voters fail to approve a tax increase. Ironically, Friday was Homecoming at Alpena.

"It's pretty tense, a very tense situation," said John Gruden, director of secondary education. "It's just kind of a calm — you can feel there is tension there, something is just not right."

"They are not running around, laughing and smiling," he said of the students. "I was just in the cafeteria, and there are not too many smiling faces, nobody looking around."

There was not much enthusiasm for Homecoming, Gruden said, not on "Black Friday."

Custody key to child's abortion

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (UPI) — An attorney's bid to secure a custody order to obtain a court-ordered abortion for a sexually abused 11-year-old girl was rejected Friday by a Kalamazoo County circuit judge.

Judge John Fitzgerald upheld a juvenile court ruling and refused to grant temporary custody of the girl to her father, who would have permitted the abortion.

The girl's mother is opposed to the abortion, but neither parent has legal custody of the girl, who was declared a ward of the court Sept. 22.

A man who lived with the girl, her sister and mother allegedly had relations with the girl. He is being held in the county jail on first-degree criminal sexual conduct charges.

Flooding continues in Texas

SHERMAN, Texas (UPI) — A night of torrential, hard-driving rain forced more than 500 people, including the residents of a nursing home, to flee to higher ground Friday.

Several days of unusually heavy rains across north and central Texas already had been blamed for six deaths and Friday's storm covered much of the farmland from Dallas to Sherman — a distance of some 60 miles — with several inches of water.

The National Weather Service warned Friday's storm had become nearly stationary and advised as much as 4 additional inches of rainfall could be expected throughout the area.

Sheriff's officials said two cars were swept off the road early Friday by rising floodwaters, but sheriff's deputies plucked the two motorists from trees and a creek, frightened but unhurt.

Schools and numerous businesses in Sherman, population 30,000, were closed and cars that had been picked up by the water and scattered like toys lay on sidewalks and in flooded Sandy Creek. An asphalt parking lot was ripped apart by the force of the floodwaters.

CORE director indicted

NEW YORK (UPI) — Roy Innis, the executive director of the Congress of Racial Equality, was indicted Friday for allegedly assaulting a Manhattan man who he believed had stolen a radio.

At the same time, the grand jury in state Supreme Court in Manhattan dismissed three charges against Innis' alleged victim, Amstead Rice, 33.

The indictment, charging one count of second-degree assault, punishable by up to seven years in prison, stemmed from an Aug. 14 incident in which Innis and an unnamed man allegedly attacked Rice with a knife and broom handle.

Rice was accused by CORE officials of stealing the radio from a car owned by CORE outside the civil rights organization's headquarters in Manhattan.

Church unable to locate Moon

NEW YORK (UPI) — Unification Church officials said Friday they tried to reach their leader, Rev. Sun Myung Moon, to tell him of his indictment on tax evasion charges but said they do not know where he is.

"We have one of our Korean representatives trying to call him," said Dr. Mose Durst, president of the Unification Church of America. "Presumably he's been reached by now."

Durst, who would not reveal the name of the representative, said Moon was "out of the country," but said he did not know where.

Asked why the national headquarters of the church, located in New York, did not know the whereabouts of its founder and adviser, Durst said, "It's not a mystery, just a practical difficulty."

Idaho Democrats meet today

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Democratic Party officials will meet in Boise today to design programs for becoming a more viable force in the state's politics, a party official said.

Congressional candidate Larry LaRocca, one of the Democrats who will be attending the all-day meeting in the Hall of Mirrors today, said party officials hope to gain a "positive thrust forward toward meeting the challenges of the 1982 election."

He said Tom Bedell, a political consultant, will address the group. Bedell founded the Congressional Management Foundation in Washington, D.C., and was the co-founder of the Montana Committee for an Effective Legislature.

The Saturday meeting is the last in a series of three workshops held by the Democrats.

Washington nuke decision delayed

SEATTLE (UPI) — The board of directors of the financially strapped Washington Public Power Supply System Friday postponed a final decision on whether to order termination of two of its five nuclear plants under construction.

Following a decision by Portland General Electric to reject participation in a $150 million plan to mothball the two reactors for 20 months, WPPSS managing director Robert Ferguson recommended that the plants be terminated.

"I report with regret that I received word the PGE board has rejected the proposal," said Ferguson. "I have no other alternative than to recommend termination of Projects 4 and 5."

Board members then approved a motion to reconvene Tuesday afternoon, when they are expected to hear Ferguson's outline of termination procedures and vote on whether to accept it. They approved the motion after Ferguson assured them the supply system had sufficient funds to pay its bills for the two plants until that time.

Nick Cain, president of the WPPSS board, said it would be up to the 88 Northwest public utilities that own the plants to figure out before Tuesday if there is still a way to save the reactors.

The Portland General Electric board voted unanimously not to join the bailout plan, despite a plea from Washington Gov. John Spellman.

The private utility 10 days earlier rejected a proposal that it pay $17.5 million, saying it wanted something more tangible in return for its contribution. The new plan called for a payment of $14 million.

James Durham, senior vice president of PGE, said in Portland that WPPSS officials failed to make any additional concessions.

"The board gave very careful consideration, the company gave very careful consideration, and we decided that the risks to our ratepayers and stockholders are greater than the benefits we would receive from participating," said Durham.

Durham acknowledged that PGE's decision might mean that one or both of the uncompleted plants may be terminated, but he said that doesn't concern the board as much as the possible problems of joining the bailout plan.

The PGE rejection caused the mothball plan to collapse like a set of dominoes because it jeopardized the participation of three other private utilities. Without them, support of direct service industries — mainly aluminum companies — was also in doubt, and that would have left the participating public utilities holding the bag.

Democrats open national strategy meeting

BALTIMORE (UPI) — More than 60 Democratic Party leaders Friday opened a two-day meeting of the party's National Strategy Council to begin planning for the 1982 elections.

The conference on the edge of Baltimore's newly redeveloped inner harbor also served as a forum for Democrats to blast the Reagan administration's economic policy.

A Democratic Party "who's who" attended, including House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd and a number of past and future presidential contenders — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Gov. John V. Brown of Kentucky and former Vice President Walter Mondale.

Democratic National Chairman Charles Manatt, who organized the council, said additional meetings will be held every three or four months until next year's elections.

"We are really looking forward to taking on this administration," he said.

O'Neill said the session would provide the "game plan" for Democratic victories in 1982.

"We expect to reverse the 1980 results," he said. "I am confident 1982 will not be a good year for Republicans — things seem to be closing all around them after a good three or four months."

Reagan's economic plan is not working, "Americans don't like what they see in Washington today," he said, complained to Watt that Gulf Resources — Bunker Hunt's parent company — was refusing to quote a price to any potential buyer of the smelter.

Watt

"Don't we have more to fear from corporate America?" Blackbird asked.

But Watt argued that America needs capital more than anything else to stimulate jobs and improve the economy.

"We need millions of jobs in the United States, and we can't afford to lose any jobs in the valley," he said.

Earlier in the day, National GOP Chairman Richard Richards criticized the Democrats for lacking the "guts" to make difficult decisions like cutting taxes or reducing government spending.

Richards told state Republican party leaders in Coeur d'Alene that the Democrats "were caught off guard last January."

"They didn't have a budget-cutting plan of their own and they didn't have a tax-cutting plan of their own," he said. "The Democrats never had the guts to tackle these programs themselves."

He also assured the GOP leaders that no one in America would go hungry as a result of President Reagan's economic policies. And Richards predicted the president would be successful in his fight on Capitol Hill to gain Senate approval of the plan to sell AWAC's jets to Saudi Arabia.

Today's weather

Fair weather continues through weekend

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:

Fair through the weekend. Highs today near 60. Warmer Sunday with highs in the upper 60s. Lows 25 to 35.

Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley:

Fair through the weekend. Highs 55 to 60 both days. Lows 15 to 25.

Northern Utah and Nevada:

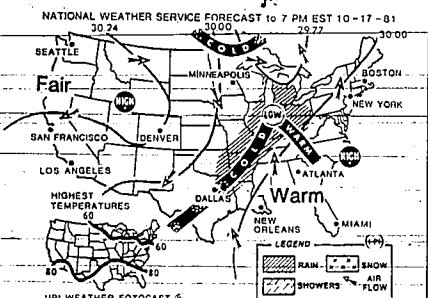

Mostly sunny and warmer in Nevada. Highs 55 to 65 today and in the 60s on Sunday. Lows in the 20s. Partly cloudy today in Utah and sunny on Sunday. Warmer with highs in the 50s today and the 60s Sunday. Lows in the 20s.

Synopsis:

Generally clear skies prevailed over Idaho Friday and will remain at least through the middle of next week.

Warmer daytime temperatures are also in prospect, although overnight lows will be chilly.

On Friday, most of Idaho was bathed in sunshine although some showers were reported in the southeast from a storm system centered over Salt Lake City. Malad reported .02 inch of rain. In the north, a temperature inversion trapped pollutants near the ground and similar conditions prevailed likely today.

There was also some patchy fog along the Idaho-Montana border and in the panhandle.

Afternoon temperatures continued to moderate with the warmest reading 71 degrees at Weiser. The coldest morning low was 21 at Fairfield.

In Twin Falls, the pollen count Friday was 15 per cubic meter of air.

Conditions for most harvest operations, outside farm work and hay drying in the Magic Valley will be generally good to excellent. Areas of light to moderate frost this morning will dissipate by 10 a.m. Soil temperatures will exceed 45 degrees around 11 a.m.

The extended forecast for Monday through Wednesday calls for dry weather with high temperatures in the 50s and 60s and lows from 25 to 35.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the warmest temperature was 95 at McAllen, Texas, and the coldest was 17 at West Yellowstone, Mont.

Moshe Dayan said keep treaty despite Sadat's assassination

Dayan urged Israelis to keep peace effort

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — In Moshe Dayan's last published words, he urged the people of Israel to adhere to the peace treaty with Egypt despite the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

"The agreement should be stuck to and not allowed to fall," Dayan wrote in Friday's edition of the newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth.

Although he was Israel's pre-eminent military leader, Dayan was also one of Israel's leading peace negotiators.

His long years as a respected soldier-politician, architect of the peace process with Egypt, dynamic symbol of his country, kept his opinions sought after in the press at home and abroad.

But when he resigned as foreign minister in 1979, Moshe Dayan lost his direct line to Prime Minister Menachem Begin and the ready impact of his ideas on Israeli policy.

Ending his life as a parliament member from a weak two-member party, the press became Dayan's last bastion of influence shortly before his death Friday at the age of 68.

"He has had no political influence in the past year, as his health deteriorated," Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's spokesman said after Dayan died of heart failure Friday at 66.

Dayan had the dash and originality that sometimes meant the difference in delicate diplomatic efforts — donning disguises for clandestine meetings with Arab leaders abroad, dropping ing in for coffee at the homes of West Bank Palestinian notables when foreign minister.

Analysis

Dayan was considered a moderating influence on Begin's last hardline Cabinet, especially in the negotiations for a future self-rule plan for the Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"He had his personal style," said Elias Freil, the Palestinian mayor of the West Bank town of Bethlehem. "He could have achieved something with the Arabs I met with him only a few months ago."

It was because of differences with Begin over the Palestinian autonomy negotiations that Dayan quit the Cabinet in October 1979.

Since then, he has pushed his idea for the unilateral institution of autonomy and withdrawal of the Israeli occupation forces from the population centers of the West Bank and Gaza.

But the plan failed to win wide support in either Israel or the territories.

The party platform of his two-man Tefen faction in parliament also contained a provision that "would permit Jordan to raise the issue of the status of Jerusalem in eventual peace negotiations."

Environmental groups step up Watt attack

BOISE (UPI) — Two environmentalist groups vowed Friday to step up the fight against Interior Secretary James Watt's land-use policies and make him pay for "sins" against the environment.

Representatives of the Sierra Club and Idaho Conservation League called for Watt's dismissal, warning that he was a "land-development advocate 'run amok' with the power of the federal bureaucracy."

The blasts of criticism — delivered in separate Boise news conferences — coincided with Watt's appearance in Idaho for a gathering of Western Republicans at Coeur d'Alene.

Members of the groups said they would seek to educate the public about the dangers they saw in Watt's plans for the West during the Reagan administration. A petition drive seeking Watt's ouster has gathered 1 million signatures and is aimed at convincing Congress to resist Watt's proposals and put pressure on President Reagan to fire the controversial cabinet member, they said.

"Idaho is America's sanity," and Watt's policy of accelerating and expanding development of natural resources is the greatest threat ever against the state's environment, said ICL member Joe Leonard, a wilderness guide from Stanley.

"It's taken a mandate for economic recovery and is using it to carry out wholesale destruction" of the environment, Bruce Boccord of the ICL charged. Boccord said Watt was devoted to using federal land — including wilderness — for energy development at the expense of other uses.

Watt's designs would ruin much Western rangeland due to overgrazing, kill forests by neglecting the sustained-yield concept, pollute rivers, lakes and streams with mining and water-project wastes, and could wipe out several endangered species, Boccord said.

Watt set up a committee to present a conservationist view during land-use studies. Its most important project now is trying to prevent the U.S. Forest Service from opening the White Clouds and Sawtooth mountain ranges to mining, he said.

A Sierra Club official said earlier Friday that Watt's pro-development policies could temporarily increase employment in the wood-products industry, but in the long run, timber reserves would be depleted and countless jobs would be lost.

"In the end, workers will be out of jobs because the resource will be depleted," Chris Yoder said.

Yoder called Watt "one-dimensional" and said he should "moderate his views or be replaced."

He said the club was trying to "educate the people as to the sins of Watt" — both against the environment and against congressional restraints on administration actions.

Yoder also said federal Bureau of Land Management changes under the current administration would do more harm than good. He said recent BLM budget decisions had "shorted" proper range management in Idaho for the benefit of increasing funding for oil and natural gas leasing.

Yoder said that means BLM range-use decisions will be based on "guesses or the needs of grazers rather than sound environmental data," and therefore rangeland will be degraded.

He said the about 4,000 signatures collected in Idaho during the Sierra Club's petition drive against Watt would be delivered to the state's congressional delegation Monday.

The petition drive will be expanded to target other administration officials, including the president, Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Anne Gorsuch and BLM Director Robert Burford, he said.

Watt's political allies rally on Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary James Watt's political allies rallied to his defense on the Senate floor Friday as part of an effort to discredit an anti-Watt petition drive by environmentalists.

Assistant Senate Republican leader Ted Stevens of Alaska, joined by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., branded Watt's detractors "extremist environmentalists."

Stevens accused the Sierra Club, which has gathered 1.1 million signatures on petitions demanding that Watt be removed from office, of mounting a "media blitz" to unsettle Watt, who he said "would be a good secretary of the interior if he is given the chance."

Watt is supported by "a majority of Americans . . . and certainly by an overwhelming majority of Alaskans," Stevens said. "I hope Congress will see through these tactics."

Thurmond warned of "a concerted drive to damage this fine man . . . an able, a courageous and devoted public servant."

Douglas Baldwin, Watt's personal spokesman, charged a leaked Sierra Club document proved the nationwide petition drive is really a club promotion "packaged with a sort of corporate Madison Avenue flavor."

"It's a membership and fundraising drive disguised as an attack on Secretary Watt and the whole thing is wrapped up in a plan to manipulate the media and the Congress," he said. "And they're ending the thing with a square dance."

The document sent to hundreds of chapter leaders of the 245,000-member Sierra Club last summer described the petition drive as "an unparalleled opportunity" to demonstrate "the unique grassroots political strength of the Sierra Club" in Washington. It said the club's plan was begun with "careful political soundings and 'inside' advice from Capitol Hill."

A cover memorandum warned "the political and media impact" of the drive would be lost if it was leaked to "Watt's allies, giving them a chance to react."

The drive culminates Monday with a petition presentation on the Capitol steps to House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., and Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

Doug Scott, the senior Sierra Club staffer who drafted the plan, said the club is "not the least bit troubled by the release of the document."

"The Sierra Club is a political organization that is seeking Watt's removal and the overturn of anti-conservation programs of the Reagan administration," he said. "To accomplish that, it is necessary that the Sierra Club have a bigger budget, more members and more members. We are constantly seeking to add to our strength and the impact of what we do."

Government raises FICA limits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The earnings limit for Social Security taxes — the point at which the government stops taking money out of your paycheck for the retirement fund — will rise to $32,400 in 1982, the government said Friday.

That is an increase of $2,700 from this year's earnings limit of $29,700.

And Americans paying the top rate will shell out $195 more next year, since the maximum tax will rise from $1,975 to $2,170.

Under a law passed in 1977 to bail out the retirement system, the Social Security tax rate rises next January from 6.65 percent of earnings to 6.70 percent. Employers' contributions rise by the same amount.

The payroll tax for an average worker making $13,729 will rise by $6.86, from $912.58 this year to $919.44 next year, Social Security officials said.

The law requires the earnings limit to rise in response to increases in the average annual wages nationwide.

For the past four years, however, Congress has set its own earnings limits, which were higher than those the automatic escalator would have set.

The earnings limit is $300 higher than predicted several weeks ago by the business group Commerce Clearing House, which based its forecast on Social Security and Senate Finance Committee documents.

For the self-employed, the 1982 tax rate will rise from 9.30 percent to 9.35 percent next year, resulting in a maximum possible tax of $3,029.40, up $267.30 over this year, the government said.

The earnings limit for self-employed people also rises to $32,400 annually.

Meantime, administration officials conceded Social Security could have reaped a billion dollars more last year if its trustees had been allowed to play the market better.

The law requires trustees to invest in government securities that take at least four years to mature and are based on average market yields. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., and others want to allow shorter-term investments that could yield more interest.

Several other Social Security changes also will take effect Jan. 1, the government noted Friday. They include:

- The maximum amount of earnings a beneficiary under age 65 can earn in a year without losing Social Security benefits will rise from $4,080 in 1981 to $4,440 in 1982.
- Beneficiaries aged 65 to 72 may earn $6,000 in 1982, up from this year's $5,500, before losing benefits. The amount was specified in the 1977 law.
- A worker must earn $400 next year, up from $310 this year, to be eligible for a quarter of coverage under Social Security.

AWACS campaign showing dividends

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's personal campaign to coax the Senate into approving the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia is showing dividends, an administration spokesman said Friday.

"We're higher up the mountain than we were before," David Gergen, the White House communications director, told reporters. "We're still behind, but we're definitely closer."

But while Gergen said a "momentum" was swinging toward the president's position, Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee acknowledged "It's still an uphill fight" for the administration.

Reagan argues the $8.5 billion Saudi arms package, which includes five sophisticated Airborne Warning and Control System planes, is a necessary part of the march toward a regional peace in the Middle East and will not jeopardize the security of Israel.

The president met privately Friday with eight senators in the Oval Office and one, Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who had been leaning in favor of the sale, announced afterward he would support the package.

Johnston also projected a narrow win when the controversial matter comes up for a full Senate vote.

"I think it is going to be close. I think it is going to be tough. I think he is going to win," Johnston said.

Gergen said the president is still reading a confidential letter to the Senate spelling out safeguards in the arms sale. He said the letter, which "is not being shown to every senator who comes in the door," is having a persuasive effect on Reagan's Oval Office guests.

"I think many senators found it very reassuring that the president would put down in writing what the conditions are going to be and make that a personal commitment and a commitment of this administration," he said.

In a parliamentary move to give the president more time to win necessary votes for passage, Johnston delayed the Senate vote until later this month.

At least 51 votes are needed to veto the sale if all senators are voting, and various polls show opponents gradually losing their numerical edge. The latest count by United Press International shows 52 senators opposed to the deal, with nine senators uncommitted.

Gergen said that by the end of the day, Reagan would have talked personally with 24 senators since beginning his personal AWACS lobbying.

In addition to his meeting with Johnston, the president met during the morning with Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who remained undecided; Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., who said he is still against the sale; and Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., also uncommitted but still leaning against it.

Nimitz crash pilot taking medication?

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — Preliminary Navy reports suggest that a Marine pilot who crashed aboard the aircraft carrier Nimitz, killing 14 people, may have been drowsy under medication not prescribed by a military doctor, a congressional aide said Friday.

An aide to Rep. Joseph D. Addabbo, D-N.Y., said the report indicated the pilot may have lined up along the right side of the ship's flight-deck instead of the center because of a malfunction in the runway's lights.

The aide, who asked not to be identified, said the report "indicates that no military doctor prescribed the medication," an anti-anxiety drug, for Lt. Steve White, 27, of Houston, and that investigators "found no tablets or bottles" in his personal effects.

He also added a reported possible fuel shortage could also have been a factor in the crash.

Of the possible lights malfunction, the aide said, "The set of lights on the center of the deck usually would have strobes flashing to indicate the center line. The Navy has indicated the center strobe was missing. When you see the video, it appears the guy was lining up along the right hand lights."

The aide said the Navy's final report could produce different findings. Addabbo, chairman of the House subcommittee on defense appropriations, is also investigating the crash "and we may or may not agree with that report," the aide said.

The Navy earlier this week confirmed details of White's autopsy in response to a statement by Addabbo.

Regan wants to cancel passbook interest raise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said Friday he will ask government officials to cancel a one-half percent increase in the passbook savings interest rates that was to become effective Nov. 1.

The passbook savings rate is now 5.25 percent for commercial banks and 5.5 percent at thrift institutions.

On Sept. 22, the Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee voted 3-2 to approve a half-point increase in the passbook savings rates, effective Nov. 1. Regan was one of the three committee members to approve the raise.

"I have had a change of mind," Regan told reporters after a White House briefing Friday. "I am asking my fellow members on the D.I.C. to hold up on the one-half percent increase in passbook savings until such time as we can find out the effects of this 'All Savers' certificate."

Regan said he made the decision after being told of potential damaging costs the "All Savers" — which currently offer 12.14 percent interest, but in combination with the tax savings, provide yields of double that and more for people in high tax brackets — could inflict on the thrift industry.

The thrift industry has said much of the money being deposited in the tax-exempt All Savers certificates is merely being switched from low-yield passbook accounts, which provide a low-cost source of funds for the savings institutions.

Regan could not explain exactly how a cancellation of the half-percent increase would stem the shift of passbook funds into the far more attractive tax-free certificates.

The increase had provoked furious opposition from the thrift industry, which said it would cost savings institutions $500 million the first year, with no accompanying benefit.

Economic blues

Factory production declines; some officials fear recession

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Board Friday reported a widespread drop in factory production in September, a serious sign for some economists that the nation is "closer to a recession."

Industrial production was down 0.8 percent for the month after seasonal adjustment, more than most economists expected and the largest setback since the depths of last year's July recession.

A widely followed economist who previously forecast a worsening of the economy late this year, Lacy Hunt of Fidelity Bank, Philadelphia, now foresees the unemployment rate climbing to 8 percent by Christmas.

Hunt also said the production cutbacks under way signal a "very intensive" anti-inflation fight by businessmen new reasons to postpone making the investments the administration is counting on to help a recovery.

Another economist usually more optimistic than most, Michael Evans of Evans Economics, agreed to a large extent. "It's not very good news," he said. "The idea that the recession is spreading is apparently finally taking hold in the manufacturing sector."

Evans, noting existing narrow recessions in the housing and auto industries, added, "I think the industrial production number pushes us closer to a recession, but I'm not ready to call it a recession yet."

Chief Commerce Department economist Robert Ortner said the figures could mean the economy will slow even more later this year, showing up in unemployment figures.

But he added that even further deterioration in production still "sets the stage for a healthy, sustainable upturn in the economy, which was what the administration recovery was all about."

If nothing else, Ortner said, "maybe this will cheer up the bond market," which would benefit from an economic slowdown that lowered demands for credit and eased interest rates.

The Fed reported that reductions in industrial output were "widespread," far beyond the auto and housing sectors.

The manufacture of construction supplies now is below the level of a year ago. Overall production is only 5.3 percent ahead of last year at the same time.

The Fed also said auto production may drop in October for the third straight month. Hunt said the drop is "consistent with the notion" unemployment will rise to 8 percent in the first quarter of 1982.

Nobel economics winner raps Reagan's economic program

NEW YORK (UPI) — In a seathing assault on President Reagan's economic program, this year's Nobel prize winner in economics Friday predicted administration policies would keep interest rates high and the economy sluggish for years.

Professor James Tobin of Yale University said the administration's reliance on the Federal Reserve to curb inflation would restrain economic growth for several years.

"The purely monetary cure for inflation can hold down the economy for half the decade, with capital formation discouraged either by high real interest rates or by bloomy profit calculations or both," Tobin said in a speech at New York University.

In his second address since the Nobel award was announced on Tuesday, Tobin asserted that Fed officials "appreciate much better than President Reagan and his associates that Fed money supply policies will not allow room for real economic growth unless wage and price inflation melts by a point or two a year."

"Given the stubbornness of built-in wage and cost inflation, there is likely to be considerable economic pain and damage during a transition of several years."

In a speech Thursday night at Central Connecticut State College, Tobin ended his self-imposed silence on Reagan's policies, saying he believed a "modest program of wage and price controls" was the answer to the nation's economic woes.

At an impromptu news conference Friday, Tobin said the economy was either on the verge of a recession or already in one.

The Yale economist said the latest round of proposed budget cuts was unlikely to bring interest rates down.

Rather, he said, Fed policy would gradually lower rates but only at the expense of economic growth.

The huge tax cuts, Tobin said, "will be widening the gulf between the living standards of the rich and those of the poor without promised compensation in the conquest of stagflation."

CARRIERS

INDIVIDUALLY DIFFERENT . . .
CHARACTERISTICALLY THE SAME

The old image of the newspaper boy certainly has changed in the last few years.

Your newspaper carrier might still be a young boy . . . or he might very well be a she . . . or a man, a woman, or even a senior citizen.

He (or she) might just be starting a career, supporting or helping to support a family, or supplementing a retirement income.

With all of their individual differences, they are still striving for one goal: to serve the people!

For whatever reasons these individuals choose to be newspaper carriers, they are to be commended on International Newspaper Carrier Day, for their dedication to serving newspaper subscribers the world over . . . for bringing the world news to the reader's doorsteps.

Senate Republicans tell Reagan of three-year budget plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republicans Friday sent President Reagan word of their budget plan, but they will try to reach a budget-balancing goal over three years.

Appropriations Committee chairman Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., described efforts to pin down the cuts as a "floating ear game" with an ultimate goal of balancing the budget in fiscal 1984.

Hatfield and other GOP leaders met with budget director David Stockman and White House chief of staff James Baker on Capitol Hill to discuss the state of the president's latest budget-cut package.

Afterward, Hatfield told reporters he suggested a $4 billion defense cut as part of his committee's share of the proposed cuts, but the White House team stood by its original proposal for only $2 billion in cuts.

Stockman also said the administration still hopes for the $16 billion in proposed last month in additional spending reductions and tax raising measures for fiscal 1982.

But the senators tried to shift the focus of the debate from the $16 billion Reagan wants this fiscal year to the amount that would be necessary to balance federal spending by 1984.

Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said, "We support the president's call for $10 billion over three years. We support the totality of the president's request."

Baker would not say whether the group supported or thought it could reach Reagan's target of $16 billion in 1982 cuts.

But Hatfield said his panel could only come up with $5 billion or $6 billion of the $16 billion it has been asked to find. He said the $16 billion might be achieved through actions by other committees, but it did not appear the other chairman offered plans to make up the difference.

And Finance Committee chairman Robert Dole, R-Kan., already has said he doesn't think he can get a tax bill or a measure reforming basic benefit programs — both parts of the package — to the floor before next year.

"I don't think we ought to get locked into target figures for the short term without relating them to the long term," Hatfield said at a news conference called to outline where he thinks deeper defense cuts can be made.

"The $16 billion is a target but in some ways it's like a floating ear game."

Hatfield proposed the substitution or cancellation of nine weapons systems that he said are of questionable value, a 6 percent reduction in civilian employment at the Pentagon, and a 15 percent reduction in consulting contracts.

Convicted spy sentenced to life

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Former Army code custodian Joseph George Helmich Jr., who said the Soviet Union top secret information for $131,000 in order to get out of debt, was sentenced to life in prison Friday.

"Congress has expressed its views on the seriousness of this offense," said Judge Susan H. Black. "The penalty will be the maximum provided by law."

Helmich, who was the code custodian for the U.S. Army Signal Corps communications relay station in Paris, France, at the time, said he decided to sell the information to the Soviets out of a "desperate need for $500 to $600."

He had run up debts, had his wallet stolen and was ordered by his commanding officer to pay the debts or face court martial, he said.

There was testimony at the trial that Helmich was promoted to colonel in the Soviet Army and awarded a "hero's medal of the first order," which still hangs in the halls of the Kremlin.

No suspects in Como shooting

LA PUENTE (UPI) — Police said Friday they have no suspects in the shooting of Kenneth Como, a former Manson family member freed this week after serving nearly 10 years in prison and ambushed just two days later.

Como was released Tuesday and was living in La Puente with his mother.

Como was arrested Aug. 22, 1971, hours after a gun battle with police when he and five other Manson family members fled from a Hawthorne sporting goods store they had robbed of more than 140 weapons.

Authorities later discovered the group planned to use the guns to hijack an airliner at Los Angeles International Airport and execute a passenger each hour until Manson was freed.

At the time, Manson was in Los Angeles waiting to testify in another trial.

Como was originally sentenced to serve 15 years to life for the sporting goods store robbery.

While at Folsom Prison, Como married another Manson family member, Catherine "Gypsy" Shaw, who also had participated in the Hawthorne robbery. She is now serving a sentence at the San Diego Metropolitan Correctional Center for her role in a credit card and mail fraud.

Japan mine accident kills at least 33; may be worst ever

TOKYO (UPI) — Invisible clouds of deadly methane gas spread through a coal mine in northern Japan Friday, killing at least 33 miners.

Officials said there was no hope left for 62 others trapped nearly 2,000 feet underground.

News reports from the mine at Yubari, a town near Sapporo, 400 miles north of Tokyo, also said up to 10 rescuers may have died from the thick coal dust and gas after they entered the mine shaft.

Police and officials of the Hokkaido Steamship and Coalery Co. mine agreed that at least 33 miners died, but police said only 36 were trapped.

The announcement appeared to be a prelude to a decision to pump water into the shaft to reduce the mounting danger posed by a smoldering fire touching off a dense pocket of gas.

Oxygen pumped into the mine for the trapped miners was cut off in the first effort to contain the blaze.

All but 114 of the 835 workers in the mine scrambled to safety as alarms went off. Weary and black-faced, another 45 miners eventually escaped in small groups when gas levels in the mine's areas in which they were trapped subsided enough to risk a scramble for the surface.

Poland gives harshest attack

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The Polish government Friday bluntly accused Solidarity of striving for a "totalitarian dictatorship" of the 10-million-member union in an attempt to overthrow the government.

The accusation, the harshest and most explicit yet, came as Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania unleashed a bitter attack against Solidarity at a meeting of the Communist Party central committee.

He said the union was using Poland's economic crisis as a springboard to power and called for a mass purge of party members to oust union sympathizers. He also urged a six-month ban on all strikes.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban told a nationwide television audience that Solidarity was attempting a "paper coup" with its proposal for a Social Economic Council to oversee government policy.

This demand is on the agenda at the ongoing economic talks between the union and the government.

"It is a plot against the structure of the state and an attempt to form a totalitarian dictatorship of Solidarity," Urban said one day after government and union leaders agreed on a temporary freeze on food prices.

"The document confirms the charges by the party and government that Solidarity aims at taking over power... It wants to replace the operation of the state," he said.

In his speech, Kania said the government must be equipped "to act using all means which may prove indispensable to defend socialism, to restore legal order and to halt the destructive processes in the national economy."

He said Solidarity rejected the East Bloc and held allegiances toward the West — something which constitutes the way to Poland's destruction.

"Let's put it openly," Kania told the party meeting. "The line of 'prolonging the economic crisis is aimed at taking political power.'"

He also called for a return to the six-day work week in key industries and said the 1 million Solidarity members among the Communist Party's 3 million members would have to choose between being in the union or being in the party.

Mubarak starts new crackdown

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — In a new crackdown by President Hosni Mubarak, more than 1,500 religious extremists and suspected agitators have been arrested in the 10 days since President Anwar Sadat's assassination, sources close to the government said Friday.

These arrested were among 7,000 to 8,000 Muslim fundamentalists and others suspected of subversive aims who were named in a list Sadat talked about before he died. The sources predicted many more arrests to come.

Mubarak made no mention of the crackdown in an escalating tensions between neighboring ally Sudan and enemy Libya. But in a telegram to President Reagan, he said he anticipated closer relations with the United States.

"We look forward with confidence to the strengthening of ties of positive and fruitful cooperation between our two friendly countries for their mutual benefit and in the interest of world security and peace," Mubarak said.

The exact whereabouts of the two AWACS spy planes sent by the Reagan administration was kept secret by U.S. and Egyptian officials. The planes arrived Thursday from Oklahoma and immediately went on patrol rather than landing at an Egyptian airbase as scheduled.

In his crackdown, Sadat put more than 1,500 people behind bars and said his only regret was acting sooner. The sources said "at least as many" suspects had been arrested in recent days.

Technicians to reload shuttle fuel

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Preparations for reloading shuttle rocket propellants aboard the space shuttle Columbia began Friday at Kennedy Space Center.

Apprehensive technicians were gearing up for the scheduled launch Nov. 4.

A spill of the chemical Sept. 22 damaged vital heat tiles and forced disappointed space officials to delay the original launch date of Oct. 9.

Mark Hess, a spokesman for the space agency, said the refueling will probably begin Saturday night and take about six days.

"We should finish up sometime Friday afternoon if everything goes well," said Hess.

Technicians were midway through the propellant loading when two to three gallons of toxic nitrogen tetroxide spilled from a leaky connector and sloshed down the front side of Columbia.

The chemical ruined the glue on 329 of the 31,000 silica insulation tiles designed to protect the shuttle from the intense heat of re-entry into the Earth's atmosphere.

The repair job on the tiles was completed earlier this week and engineers are confident modifications in the propellant loading process will prevent another costly accident.

With the shuttle fixed, the "go-for-launch" momentum is building, although Hess said everyone at NASA is trying hard to concentrate on the tricky operation at hand.

"The feeling is let's get this hypergolic loading out of the way," he said. "I don't think anybody is looking beyond that. The spill was a failure that was never expected and now the launch officials know what the impact can be."

The propellants, an oxidizer and a fuel, are considered hypergolic because they ignite when exposed to each other, producing a fiery gas powerful enough to fuel the in-flight orbital maneuvering and reaction control systems that help guide the shuttle in orbit.

The two propellants are placed separately into tanks in the forward and aft sections of the shuttle where they are stored until the power is needed after the Columbia leaves the Earth's atmosphere.

The shuttle is boosted off the launch pad, however, by three main engines fueled by a separate external tank and twin solid-fuel rocket boosters, both of which are jettisoned as the Columbia goes into orbit.

Attorney portrays Presley as 'sophisticated' drug user

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Elvis Presley was a "sophisticated" drug user while kept a pharmaceutical reference book by his bedside the day in the drug trial of Presley's doctor was told Friday.

Defense attorney James F. Neal attempted to convince a Criminal Court jury that Dr. George Nichopoulos prescribed massive quantities of drugs as part of a plot to cut back on drug use by the rock 'n' roll king.

Nichopoulos, 53, Presley's doctor for 11 years, is on trial on 14 criminal counts of overprescribing addictive drugs to Presley, singer Jerry Lee Lewis, himself, and eight others.

Neal cross-examined prosecution witness Jack Hirsch, a Memphis pharmacist who pleaded no contest last year to charges of filling 175 prescriptions for 11,000 pills for Presley.

Holding up a Physician's Desk Reference, Neal asked Hirsch, "Didn't Dr. Nichopoulos tell you that Elvis had a PDR by his bedside?"

Kirsch said he could not remember that conversation but added that Presley was a drug expert.

A Physician's Desk Reference is something of a drug dictionary — telling what they are made of, what they are used for, what they should not be used for and their side effects.

Neal maintained that the doctor tried to substitute sugar pills for hard drugs but had to actually buy drugs so that Presley would see the bills for them.

"Isn't it a fact that you asked him (Nichopoulos) why he was getting both (placebos and addictive pills)? Didn't he say if he (Presley) wasn't getting billed for the real thing, the placebos would not really work?" Neal asked.

"Yes he did," Kirsch replied. "Didn't he tell you that Elvis had caught him (Nichopoulos) because Mr. Presley was versed about drugs?" Neal asked.

"Yes, I knew he was well versed in drugs," Kirsch said.

Crash victims' bodies returned after 28 years

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (UPI) — The bodies of eight Navy aviators killed in a crash into an Icelandic glacier almost 28 years ago were returned to the United States Friday.

The was slight hope, however, the remains could be separately identified.

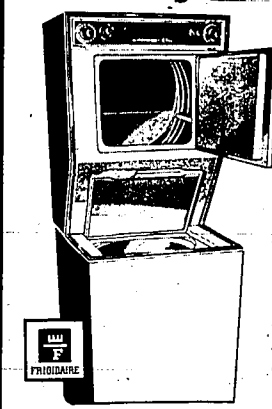

In the chilly, pre-dawn darkness, an Air Force helicopter guard provided a dignified if somber greeting for the long-lost crew of the twin-engine, anti-submarine plane.

The P-2V Lockheed Neptune was on a routine patrol flight Dec. 17, 1953, when it hit a blinding storm and radio contact was lost. No distress signal from the aircraft was ever received.

What was left of the wreckage and the crew was spotted by Icelandic shepherds who were rounding up their herds on Myrdalsjokull Glacier.

"We may never know the cause," said Lt. Cmdr. Ken Pease, a Navy spokesman.

Israel moves army offices to Jerusalem

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Defense Minister Ariel Sharon ordered the army Friday to move its headquarters from Tel Aviv to the Jerusalem area to complete the transfer of government power to Israel's "eternal capital."

The complex multi-million dollar move will take years to complete, a Defense Ministry spokesman said.

When finished, it will top off Prime Minister Menachem Begin's transfer of all major government offices from their former home in Tel Aviv to Jerusalem, a symbol of his campaign to convince the world the Holy City is Israel's "eternal, united capital."

Israeli officials had been reluctant to transfer the huge defense complex with its sophisticated communications network to isolated Jerusalem, placing it in a more vulnerable strategic position than its current site in the coastal population corridor of the Jewish state.

The spokesman said officials have not yet decided where the vast complex would be placed in the Jerusalem area. Also undecided was where the hard-pressed Israeli economy would find the money for the move.

Israel's claim to sovereignty over Jerusalem is its predominantly Arab eastern sector has not been recognized by the world community. Israel captured the sector from Jordan in the 1967 war and annexed it soon afterward.

Begin's symbolic steps to reaffirm Israel's sovereignty over both parts of Jerusalem as its capital city have triggered strong criticism abroad and prompted slain Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to suspend the Palestinian autonomy talks last year.

Key bridge ruined in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Top army officers huddled in emergency session Friday to assess the military situation after leftist guerrillas destroyed the nation's key bridge.

Defense Minister Col. Jose Guillermo Garcia visited the Puente de Oro bridge, 50 miles southeast of San Salvador, after it was blown up Thursday with dynamite in a well-coordinated pre-dawn raid by some 300 guerrillas.

"The attack persecutes the most humble sectors. It persecutes thousands of peasants," Garcia told reporters. "These acts do not benefit the people but to the contrary hurt them."

The country's military chieftains huddled for emergency strategy sessions to plot ways of coping with the loss amid reports the United States might ship El Salvador a pontoon bridge to replace the destroyed structure.

"The bridge was just destroyed yesterday so it's a little early to say (if a replacement will be shipped), but a U.S. Embassy spokesman said, 'It is certainly not out of the realm of reason but we just don't know yet.'"

Mideast peace plan causes Arab rift

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A new rift opened in Arab ranks Friday when Syrian and radical Palestinian officials rejected a Saudi Arabian peace plan for the Middle East drawn by PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

In remarks published by the leftist Beirut newspaper Al-Safir, Syria and Palestinians groups rejected the plan as being against Arab aspirations, and an unacceptable approach to a settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

What's what

"Hapieroluptas" is defined in our Love and War man's dictionary as "somebody very pleasant to touch."

Just as sailboats have the right-of-way over any other ships, so do hot-air balloons have the right-of-way over any other aircraft.

Am asked if you can drive to the spot identified in the old ballad by the line: "On-top-of-Old Smoky." To within 100 feet of it, anyway. That's the crest of Clingman's Dome, highest point at 6,642 feet in the Great Smoky Mountains.

Half the babies born never reach age 15.

NEW BUDDS

Did you think Spring was when the buds first start on a tree? So did I. But experts say those buds develop fully in the previous summer, lie dormant in the Autumn and Winter, then expand rapidly with the intake of water during the Spring. So your growing season this Summer past determined what your tree will look like next Spring.

Q. My former husband has remarried. I have custody of our children. So she's their stepmother. What legal rights does this give her insofar as they're concerned?

A. None. Stepmother is a courtesy title without legal consideration. So say the lawyers.

Q. You say references to nagging women date back as far as the earliest writings. Where in the Bible does it talk about them?

A. Proverbs 27:15: "A continual dripping on a rainy day and a contentious woman are alike."

Q. Why is a "cranberry" called that?

A. Because its pointed pink bud on its stem reminded somebody of a crane's head and neck.

FORTUNE COOKIES

Argument continues over whether fortune cookies originated in China or started in the United States. It's now claimed Canton-born David Jung introduced them here in 1912. Written messages on slips of paper folded into cakes were served in upper-class Chinese gatherings. But they didn't tell fortunes. On the slips were philosophical titles. Lottery-like, the cookies were passed out among gamblers who then wrote short essays on the drawn subjects. The essays were read aloud, and the players rated the good, the better and the best. It was a literary game.

Almanac

By United Press International

Today is Saturday, Oct. 17, the 290th day of 1980 with 75 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its last quarter. The morning stars are Mars, Saturn and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Libra. American actresses Jean Arthur and Rita Hayworth were born Oct. 17 — Arthur in 1908 and Hayworth in 1919.

On this date in history:

In 1777, at one of the great turning points of the Revolutionary War, British General John Burgoyne surrendered his forces to the Americans at Saratoga, New York.

In 1945, Juan Peron became dictator of Argentina and ran the country for 11 years until he was overthrown.

In 1977, German commandos stormed a hijacked airliner in Mogadishu, Somalia, and freed 80 hostages held aboard the plane since it left Spain for Frankfurt a day earlier. Three of the four hijackers were killed.

New host for Miss America

United Press International

NOBERT PARKS

The producers of the Miss America pageant, who dumped Bert Parks abruptly two years ago after 25 years as master of ceremonies, are switching their M.C. yet again. In is TV talk show host Gary Collins, who knows more about Miss America than most people. He is married to one, Mary Ann Mobley, the 1959 Miss America. Out is Ron Ely, who replaced Parks in an effort to enhance the program's appeal among the young. Since Parks, says a spokesman, the pageant has decided to avoid becoming too strongly identified with a single personality.

LIBERTY DAY?

The White House has politely rejected a proposal by a past president of the National Rifle Association that Oct. 19 be declared a national holiday, Liberty Day, to mark the 200th anniversary of the "Surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown." The proposal came from Harry P. Swing, 83, of Pennsburg, Pa., a regular letter-writer to public officials. He says the White House replied that the move should begin on the state-level, and Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh has his request "under consideration." Pennsburg is planning its own Liberty Day for Monday.

TOUR FUROR

Two dozen anti-royalist demonstrators had to be protected by New Zealand police Friday when visiting Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip arrived at an Auckland theater for a variety show. The demonstrators' shouts of "One, two, three, four, we don't want your Royal Tour" were drowned out by a large unsympathetic crowd. About 60 police had to intervene to prevent the demonstrators from attacking the royal couple on an eight-day visit to New Zealand.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

Sarah Weddington, women's activist and former special adviser on women's affairs to President Carter, told a public meeting at Goshen College, Goshen, Ind., that she does not expect the Equal Rights Amendment to be ratified by the June 30, 1982 deadline. "I cannot name a single state which I think might ratify the ERA between now and then," she said. "That ... gives an indication that we as a nation are not concerned about discrimination on the basis of sex. I'm convinced that the Reagan administration with its emphasis on the return to the traditional has in mind a tradition, based on stereotypes, that simply doesn't exist any more."

NAMES IN THE NEWS

Anne O'Driscoll, 58, the American woman shot in the stomach during the May 14 assassination attempt on Pope John Paul II, has undergone further surgery in Buffalo, N.Y., to redirect an intestinal bypass. Her condition was reported as stable. Barbara Haag, 25, daughter of Secretary of State Alexander Haig, is working as an $18,585-a-year staff assistant at the International Communication Agency in Washington. Arthur A. Hartman, 50, has arrived in Moscow to take up his post as U.S. ambassador to the Kremlin, and John Arthur Dean, 55, has arrived in Bangkok to take up his duties as new U.S. ambassador to Thailand.

Navy 90-Army 79; tickets aplenty

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — The Navy leads the Army 90-79 in a contest neither really wants to win.

The score is being kept on the number of parking tickets issued to the two recruit's cars. The Navy has dropped out of the competition, at the urging of authorities, and the Army is threatening to take the lead.

Research during a recent crackdown on outstanding warrants show the two recruiters have among the highest one-year ticket totals recorded in the Violations Bureau, but officials have been unable to catch up with the Army recruiter to inform him of the situation.

The Navy has apparently taken evasive action, with the last ticket against the recruiter's vehicle having been issued Aug. 28.

The Army's tan compact, however, was most recently tagged Monday — and now has 837 in unpaid fines.

Police Chief Dean Leitner, and the high totals are the result of an erroneous belief that all government vehicles are exempt from parking tickets.

He said Postal Service, emergency and public works vehicles are exempt, as are the vehicles of state senators while the Legislature is in session.

Part of the problem has been a lack of cooperation by the city's computer, which refuses to print government license plate numbers on the list of cars to be impounded.

Women's group 'honors' bosses for petty job duties

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — An organization representing women on the job believes it's time to honor bosses' acts of pettiness that really go above and beyond the call of duty.

To recognize National Boss Day, Oct. 16, the group called Minnesota Working Women announced the winners of their first annual Pettiest Office Procedure Contest.

The first place award went to an executive who, while on a business trip, would phone his secretary with "sappy love messages" for his girlfriend. It was the secretary's duty to relay the messages to his girlfriend, who would then return similar "words of love" via the secretary.

The runner-up was an attorney who would require his secretary to wash his personal laundry. Every week she would leave the office and travel to a nearby laundromat where she washed his dirty clothes, including his summer baseball uniform and other "miscellaneous athletic paraphernalia."

"Quite frankly, our judging committee had a difficult time making a decision because of the pathetic nature of some nominations," said Wendy K. Johnson, director of Minnesota Working Women.

City takes automobile to court

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (UPI) — They might have a little trouble getting the defendant in this lawsuit to testify in court. Or just into the courtroom.

The case, filed Wednesday in Mahoning County Common Pleas Court, is titled City of Youngstown vs. 1976 Cadillac, and the defendant is just that — a 1976 Cadillac Seville.

The luxury car was seized by authorities in a drug case, and the lawsuit is a legal tactic being used by city officials who want to seize it as contraband.

The civil suit was filed by city Law Director Edward N. Solnosky and his assistant, Anthony J. Grybos, after extensive research. The same maneuver has been used by federal authorities on a number of occasions, Grybos said.

According to the complaint, the car was seized when its owner, a Youngstown man, was arrested during July on a drug-related charge. The car was being used to transport drugs, investigators alleged.

Because the car has taken on a "contraband characteristic," state law provides for the courts to determine if ownership of the vehicle should be awarded to the city, Grybos said.

Suing the car instead of its owner, Grybos said, should get around defense arguments of double jeopardy — that the owner already has been charged in a related criminal case.

QUESTION ...

Is it true that the $255 death benefit from Social Security has been eliminated?

ANSWER ...

The $255 Social Security Death Benefit has not been totally eliminated. At the time of your death it will be paid to your spouse if he or she survives and is living in your household. If your spouse resides outside your household it will be paid to the person who was receiving or was eligible to receive benefits as your dependent. It may also be paid to a child entitled to receive survivor benefits in the month in which you pass away. The death benefit may no longer be paid to those persons responsible for your funeral expenses.

Veteran operator Wilma Routt, nearly alone in the empty switchboard room, says she'll place the last call in Twin Falls

Last call

Operator who placed city's first call will place final one, too

By LAURY MASHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sixty-two-year-old Wilma Routt says she placed the first telephone call for the Twin Falls phone center, and she intends to place the last.

"I'll stay all day and all night if necessary, but I'll place that last call," Routt says. "It means a lot to me."

Mountain Bell eliminated all Twin Falls operators Friday as a cost-cutting measure.

Improvements in switching mechanisms now allow customers to dial calls direct, instead of going through a local operator, according to Kenneth Mann, Mountain Bell's director of customer service in Twin Falls.

Mann says that calls to the operator now will go automatically to operators in Salt Lake City.

Boise or Grand Junction, Colo.

At one time, 100 operators attended the switchboards at 115 Third Ave. E. The last 13 retired Friday.

Mountain Bell has been working to phase out the operators in Twin Falls for two years, Mann said.

"This service improvement isn't new," he said. "They have had it in large metropolitan areas for years."

Mann said calls can be made 40-percent faster with the direct-dial system.

However, Routt says it makes her feel sad to see operators eliminated, because customers will be getting impersonal service.

Routt says she always enjoyed her job because it made her feel like she was helping people.

"A lot of people don't like getting recordings," she says.

Routt still remembers helping John Hayes, a

Magic Valley pioneer, place the first call made on the dial telephone system on Oct. 20, 1957.

Before then, operators in another Twin Falls building manually placed calls for customers.

Routt says Hayes, who is now deceased, also made the first call ever placed in Twin Falls in 1904.

"I spent half my life working in this business," she says. "It's been a main goal of my life to make people happy. It always made me feel good to get a thank-you letter from someone I helped over the phone."

Routt says she once assisted a woman caller who was having an epileptic seizure, by calling emergency services that were able to reach her in time.

"I think people appreciated that special attention," Routt says. "Sometimes, I would get thank-you letters from people I helped who were just passing through town."

Idaho Power OKs 1st small power deals

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Power Co. signed contracts with its first two small power producers Thursday.

The signings marked a significant break in an 18-month struggle between Idaho Power and the Idaho Public Utilities Commission over the merits of small power production.

"I think it's encouraging they got something signed. It's at least a basis from which to consider future contracts," IPUC member Richard High said Friday while in Twin Falls.

Small power plants produce less than one megawatt of power.

Cogeneration Inc., a Boise-based firm, will build the first two small hydro plants under agreements with private landowners in the Magic Valley.

Work on the first plant, a 316-kilowatt generator on the Little Wood River near Shoshone, could begin in two weeks, said Jim Barber, one of two design engineers for the project. The other engineer is Bill Block of Twin Falls. The plant is scheduled to begin producing power in February.

The second and larger plant, at Rock Creek where it enters the Snake River Canyon, will generate 1,732 kilowatts and is estimated to begin generating electricity in early 1983.

Idaho Power will pay 6.7 and 6.5 cents a kilowatt hour for power produced by the two plants, under terms of the 35-year contracts signed by the utility with Cogeneration. Rates offered depend on such factors as reliability, length of the contract and what time of year power is produced.

Under the order issued by the IPUC, rates are based on "avoided costs," or what the utility would pay for equivalent power from a new large plant, if one were constructed. Barber said Cogeneration has eight to 10 more small plants on the drawing board, and it expected to hear from other customers who were waiting for the first contracts to be signed.

Despite the high purchase price, High says utility customers benefit from the small power contracts in several ways.

Unlike coal-fired plants built recently outside the state's boundaries, small hydro plants in Idaho are included in local tax bases, he said.

In addition, the plants are financed privately, thereby minimizing Idaho Power's need to increase its plant construction debt.

Jerome man dies in 2-car accident

JEROME — A Jerome man died in a head-on collision on old state road 79, three miles west of the Perrine Bridge, Friday at dusk.

According to Cpl. David Rich of the Idaho State Police, the victim, 24, whose name will not be released until relatives are notified, was driving west at an excessive rate of speed. As he crested a hill, the man lost control of his car and crossed into the oncoming lane.

Before he could bring the car back, he collided with a car in the eastbound lane, driven by Jim Smallwood, of Route 3, Jerome. The impact spun both vehicles around, with the victim's car coming to rest across both lanes, while the Smallwood car slid backwards off the north shoulder of the road.

Traffic was blocked for an hour following the accident, which happened at 6:22 p.m.

The victim was dead at the scene from multiple injuries, according to Rich.

Smallwood and his wife, Lillian, were taken to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, where they both were reported in serious condition late Friday evening.

PUC member High defends new electric rate structure

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has not engaged in "social engineering" with power rates, PUC member Dick High said Friday.

Changes that took effect Oct. 1 in the method that Idaho Power Co. must use to charge for electricity brought the utility's rates closer to actual service costs. High told business and industry leaders at separate stops in Twin Falls and Buhl.

The commission's order eliminated declining block rates for power used in irrigation. It also increased some commercial and industry rates, decreased others and instituted inverted rates so that homeowners who use large amounts of power pay higher rates.

The changes did not change the amount of money received by Idaho Power. Recent requests for two 20-percent rate hikes will be considered separately.

Idaho Power endorsed several of the changes, but it objected to the inverted rates, High said, because the company for many years promoted all-electric homes, which are hit hardest by the change.

Ralph Olmstead, a gubernatorial candidate—and High's former legislative colleague, recently blasted the commission for the rate changes, terming them "social engineering." High said the commission consistently has turned down appeals for special senior citizen and low-income rates on the grounds that other branches of government could best determine these needs and provide subsidies if necessary.

The new billing structure actually decreased subsidies among customer classes, High said.

Irrigation rates in the new schedule are closer to actual cost, but they represented the greatest departure from a strictly economic formula, he said. Farm groups persuasively argued that the industry was unable to absorb larger power costs with then-existing commodity prices.

The residential rates, which charge progressively more for electricity as it is consumed, are designed to slow down winter load growth, he said, because load projections showed that Idaho Power would face its first critical shortages in winter — not summer.

While the utility could not supply all of its own electricity throughout much of this summer, ample supplies were available elsewhere in the region, High said. Winter supplies from the region would be unavailable by the end of the decade, the forecasts showed.

If winter loads in the Idaho Power service area continue to grow, a coal and higher rates will be needed to meet demand.

Final Evans kidnapping suspect pleads guilty to charges in case

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Charles Lopez, 21, of Burley, pleaded guilty Friday to attempting to kidnap Gov. John Evans' son earlier this year.

His guilty plea, entered before Fifth District Court Judge George Granata Jr., means all three Burley men arrested for the attempted kidnapping of John V. Evans Jr., a Burley banker, in May will be sentenced for the offense next week.

Lopez, Bryan Spurgeon, 22, and Russell Piper, 19, were charged with first-degree kidnapping and first-degree burglary in the incident.

Evans was held at gunpoint for a short time before Cassia County sheriff's deputies arrived. Piper was arrested at the scene; Lopez and Spurgeon were arrested later that day.

The three men also have pleaded guilty to robbery charges in connection with the robbery of a service station in Minidoka County.

Lopez pleaded guilty Friday to a second robbery charge in connection with the robbery of Albertson's Food Center in Burley in January.

His 19-year-old brother, Jimmie, also has pleaded guilty to a robbery charge stemming from that incident.

Previously, Lopez had pleaded not guilty to the charges and had relied on a defense.

Piper and Spurgeon are scheduled to be sentenced in Fifth District Court in Burley this Thursday at 1:30 p.m.

The Lopez brothers are scheduled to be sentenced in the same court on Friday at 1:30 p.m.

But that schedule apparently conflicts with plans to sentence Charles Lopez, Spurgeon and Piper in Twin Falls on Friday.

The three men have pleaded guilty to charges stemming from a May 11 extortion attempt that involved the manager of Albertson's Food Center, 1221 Addison Ave. E. Twin Falls police linked the three defendants to the extortion attempt after they were arrested in Burley.

Piper and Spurgeon have pleaded guilty to second-degree kidnapping, conspiracy to commit extortion and attempted extortion.

Lopez has pleaded guilty to a charge of an accessory to attempted extortion.

The three men are scheduled to appear before Fifth District Court Judge Theron Ward at 2 p.m.

Contacted Friday, a spokesman for the Twin Falls prosecutor said the scheduling conflict will be resolved next week.

Camas hopes to end its one-lawman status

FAIRFIELD — Camas County Sheriff Lee Brown said Friday he hopes to hire a replacement for the county's only deputy by Nov. 1.

Fairfield has been a one-lawman town since Oct. 9, when the county's lone deputy resigned to attend basic training for the National Guard.

Brett Jensen, who worked for the Rexburg Police Department before moving to Fairfield, said he has applied for Army helicopter flight school and helicopter mechanic's training in the Guard program.

Brown said he has received more than a dozen applications, including two from women, and that he expects to receive more before recommending a replacement to the county commissioners.

An experienced reserve officer has been filling in the meantime, Brown said. A part-time dispatcher, hired under the federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, also left the department recently when funding for the program ran out, he said.

A replacement will be hired to answer the telephone during a portion of each weekday, Brown said.

When the sheriff is out, calls are answered by the Camas County clerk, the sheriff's wife or the Idaho State Police, which maintains radio contact with the sheriff.

Salvation Army to hold rally

TWIN FALLS — The Salvation Army will hold a rally at 11 a.m. this Sunday, Oct. 18, at the group's center at 801 Second Ave. N. Rose and Nancy Allmendinger of the Salvation Army center in Portland, Ore., will present musical numbers and lead the teen and junior assemblies. For further information or transportation, call 733-8720.

Walnut sale aids Easter Seal

TWIN FALLS — Here's a good deal. You can buy a bag of English walnuts and help a charity at the same time. For the past several years, Twin Falls resident Clara Bednar has sold the walnuts from her backyard tree and given the proceeds to the Magic Valley Easter Seal Society. Last year, she raised $137 for the society, and this year's "harvest" is ready to sell. The walnuts will be sold for 65 cents per pound. Bednar lives at 308 Buchanan St., or for more information, you may call her at 733-1929.

Opera Guild dinner canceled

TWIN FALLS — The Northwest Opera Guild's annual luncheon, scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 21, at the Blue Lakes Country Club, has been canceled. For more information, call Liz Carlson at 733-3421.

Problem solving class slated

TWIN FALLS — Do you keep coming up with the same old answers to the same old problems? Perhaps, a course in creative problem-solving would help. And by coincidence, the Idaho State University center in Twin Falls will offer just such a course, starting next Thursday, Oct. 22.

The non-credit course will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. for five consecutive Thursdays at the center, 140 Second St. E.

Dorothy Prokes of Pocatello will teach the class. The fee is $25, and registration must be completed by Monday, Oct. 19. For more information, call Marjorie Sliotten, the center's coordinator, at 734-4478.

Police investigate two thefts

TWIN FALLS — City police are investigating two thefts that were reported Thursday.

Clyde Cagnone, Route 4, Buhl, reported that tools, valued at $800, were taken from his pickup truck around 1 p.m. Thursday. The truck was parked at the Bowldrome, 222 Eastland Drive.

The home of Ben Schreiner, 554 Fillmore St., was broken into at about 3:30 p.m. Thursday, and stereo equipment, valued at $1,150, was taken.

Narcotics Anonymous meets

TWIN FALLS — Narcotics Anonymous has started holding meetings twice each week.

In addition to the Thursday night sessions, members of the Twin Falls chapter will be able to attend Saturday night meetings.

All of the meetings will be held at 8 p.m. at the Magic Valley Alcohol Rehabilitation Center, 415 Second Ave. N., located one block south of the Safeway store.

100-year-old sleigh raffle set

GOODING — A century-old, horse-drawn sleigh will be given away in drawing, with all proceeds going to the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind in Gooding.

Tickets for the restored sleigh, valued at $5,000, can be purchased for $3 from Dorothy Herold at the school's administration building.

The winner of the sleigh, which is on display at the Safeway Store off Main Street, will be decided Saturday, Oct. 24, at 2 p.m. at the administration building.

Swan addresses Portland session American cattlemen outdone all around, spokesman states

PORTLAND (UPI) — American cattlemen are being out-priced, out-advertised, out-marketed and out-promoted.

"That is the opinion of National Cattlemen's Association President William Swan, offered Thursday at the Portland Pacific International Livestock Exposition.

"I'm sure some of us are wondering what happened to the golden age of the cattle industry," Swan told about 300 ranchers from several Western states at a beef economics conference.

"Swan said it was crucial that ranches become more efficient if the beef industry is to solve its current problems.

And those problems, he said, are marketing inroads by hog, chicken and turkey producers at the beef industry's traditional share of the domestic protein market.

BILL SWAN
...efficiency crucial

Swan, a Rogerson rancher and attorney, said the percentage of U.S. household income spent on beef declined from 4.9 percent in 1974 to 4.1 percent today.

Donald Ostenson, executive vice president of the Oregon Cattlemen's Association, said 200 cattle growers in the state likely would stop operations in 1981 because of the poor market.

Swan asked cattlemen to support congressional proposals to ban importation of beef from countries that use agricultural sprays or drugs banned in the United States.

"We're going to play hardball right up to the end on this," Swan said of the MCA lobbying effort.

James Johnson, a special assistant to Secretary of Agriculture John Block, urged the audience to oppose the measure contending it would jeopardize delicate Reagan administration efforts to erase trade barriers to U.S. exports.

"No one wins in these sorts of trade wars," Johnson said.

Gloom produces new Wall Street setback

NEW YORK (UPI) — Closing out a gloomy week, the stock market last ground Friday.

It lagged amid investor uncertainty about the future course of interest rates and the economy.

Although takeover issues were in the spotlight, trading was restrained as many investors sat out the day waiting for crucial government money figures.

The Federal Reserve, in a report released after the New York Stock Exchange closed, said the nation's money supply surged $5.6 billion in the latest statistical week after several declines.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 5.61-point winner Thursday after falling 27.49 the previous four sessions, dropped 4.57 to 851.69, bringing its loss for the week to 21.31 points.

The New York Stock Exchange index shed 0.26 to 63.13 and the price of an average share decreased 11 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 0.52 to 119.19. Declines topped advances 800,657 among the 1,869 issues traded.

Big Board volume totaled only 37,800,000 shares, down from the 42,530,000 traded Thursday, indicating considerable investor anxiety about the Fed's money supply report.

Various experts had predicted increases ranging from $5 billion to $10 billion because the period covered included October Social Security and pension fund payments plus the introduction of the government's new All-Savers certificates.

No one knows what the report will do to interest rates, which have been easing in recent weeks. Several economists have forecast new high charges in coming months.

Closer to Wall Street, several brokers, optimistic about the near-term outlook, lately have advised large investors to buy when the market shows weakness. This may have accounted for some strength in the list.

Also, many options series expired during the day and that could have accounted for some erratic price movements.

Composite volume of NYSE issues traded on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 44,243,270 shares compared with 43,355,560 traded Thursday.

The American Stock Exchange index slipped 1.14 to 307.19 and the price of a share eased five cents. Declines topped advances 297,234 among the 731 issues traded. Volume totaled 3,375,510 shares, a record compared with 4,475,300 Thursday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ index of over the counter stocks gained 0.39 to 190.24.

On the trading floor, Sunbeam, which has agreed to merge with Allegheny International for up to $550 million, was the most active NYSE-listed issue, off 3/4 to 33 1/2 after blocks of 250,000 shares at 33 1/2 and 821,500 shares at 32 1/2.

Stolen goods growing business

Dealing in stolen goods is a big and ever-growing multibillion-dollar business.

Your chances of innocently buying stolen property are increasing. Your chances of getting caught, innocent or not, are also rising.

States, cities and counties are beginning to pass strict laws forcing merchants who buy and sell used items to keep strict records of who they get them from and to whom, in turn, they sold it. The laws should help catch both the "fences" and the reputable dealers who are lax in their bookkeeping.

Courts are getting stricter in meting out punishment or damages in cases of thefts, even thefts that took place years ago.

Of course you wouldn't knowingly buy or sell stolen goods. But there is an increasing chance that, right now, you could have some purloined property in your household.

Do you have some clothes or other items that a member of your family got "cheap" from "someone at the office," union or lodge? A record or tape bought for less than half price at a "discount" store? A scarf, watch, bracelet or other trinket purchased from a sidewalk vendor at a ridiculous "low overhead" price? An "almost new" TV set from a moplighting appliance "repairman"? Everything from silverware to old books purchased from an out-of-towner who rented a motel room for two days and advertised he would buy or sell family heirlooms or antiques?

Even if you suspected everything was not as advertised, you got a receipt for your money and a bill of sale, if the price was big enough, and you convinced yourself that "It's legally mine."

Despite your receipt, you could be way out on a limb if what you bought is truly stolen property. "Your" property could be confiscated, with no compensation to you. You could be stigmatized as a sharpe, a stooge or worse — that you knew the goods were stolen.

Just this summer, a federal judge ruled that two paintings by the 15th century artist Albrecht Durer that were stolen from an East German museum in 1945 by an Allied soldier, according to the court, and later sold to an American lawyer, must be returned to the communists.

The lawyer bought the two paintings for $450 35 years ago; today, their estimated value is as much as $10 million. Furthermore, without even requiring a trial, the U.S. judge ordered the paintings returned to the East German government.

These thefts involve far more than the traditional highway hijacking of cars. They involve far more than routine goods from trucks or the simple robberies of warehouses. With auction houses now operating worldwide, organized crime is into almost every type of "hard goods," from trinkets to tape recordings, from tapestries to theological relics.

The thefts are from libraries, museums, banks, universities, private collections, even churches. Over a recent weekend, the government of Peru was reported to be staging a worldwide campaign to halt thefts of artwork, gold, silver, paintings and pottery swiped from Peruvian churches — and worth an estimated $500 million.

In another alleged international theft of collectibles, a Columbia University graduate student was accused of attempting to sell in New York four of 267 missing rare books that "disappeared" last summer from the library of University College, London. The old books' worth: an estimated $2 million.

A rash of thefts of religious books from New York area churches over the past year has prompted theologians to begin a campaign of imprinting invisible markings on rare church items to aid identification of stolen objects.

The tales go on, one matching or surpassing the other in the ingenuity of the original thief and his/her knowledge of the value of the item.

Whether the items are rare old artifacts, coins, books and jewelry, or whether they are everyday appliances, records, films, clothing or furniture, they have one thing in common: the end purchaser winds up, no matter how innocent that final purchase may have been.

The goods are confiscated. You, as the buyer, wind up without the merchandise, without the money you paid for it and, with luck, only the reputation that you were stupid.

2nd half surge gives Gooding Canyon title

DEULO — Roaring back for 22 second-half points, Gooding High School clinched the Canyon Conference championship by defeating Declo, 39-17 Friday night.

The Senators thus lock up their hold on first place with a 6-0 league record (7-1 overall) and advance to the state A-3 playoffs in two weeks.

The loss all but crushes Declo's hopes for one of the conference's two spots in the playoffs. The Hornets dropped to 3-2 in league, 6-2 overall.

"We're just kind of left in it to fight for pride now," a disappointed Hornet Coach Mike Matthews said. "We just have to play for third place now."

The game was more hotly contested than the 13-point difference implies. But as has been the case all year, Gooding's defense rose to stop the opposition when it most had to.

Trailing just 22-17 midway in the fourth quarter, Declo had the ball with good field position on third down and lacked just a yard for a first down. But Gooding stopped the Hornets on that play, and halted them again on fourth and inches to regain possession.

"If we could have gotten the first down, we could have controlled the clock, which would have been in our favor," Matthews said.

"I think that's when the wind fell out of their sails," Gooding Coach Paul Cox said, referring to the crucial stops.

Moments later Declo had the ball again, but Craig High took it away by intercepting a pass, thanks partly to considerable pressure from Gooding's defensive front.

The Senators went on to notch their final touchdown with 4:53 remaining, as quarterback Bob Hays hit Brad Tinker with a 39-yard scoring strike.

With less than three minutes remaining, Declo drove to Gooding's 25-yard line, but the Senators sacked Hornet quarterback Kelly Kidd two consecutive times to kill that threat.

Cox praised defensive end Joey James and linebacker Todd Summers for sparking the Senators' defensive effort.

Declo had built a 17-8 halftime lead and amassed a psychological advantage.

"They (the Hornets) had the momentum and the fire and we didn't," Cox admitted. "But our kids pulled themselves together at halftime and showed some championship type character in the second half."

The Senators went to work immediately after intermission, piling up 127 yards rushing in the third quarter despite scoring just one touchdown.

"Our rushing game in the second half was extremely effective. We kept it simple and straight ahead," Cox said.

Borah defense blanks Bruins

No. 1 team spoils homecoming

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The final was Borah 55, Twin Falls 0.

Broken down it was Borah's defense 41, Borah's offense 14 and Twin Falls 0 Friday night in the Bruins' homecoming game.

The Lions struck for 21 quick points — two on pass interception returns and another on a Bruin miscue at their own two — and then added 20 more points on Twin Falls fumbles in the closing six minutes of the game.

In between the statistics would never lend themselves to the lopsidedness of the final tally. In the first half Borah had only one first down — that one a long gainer that set up a 28-0 halftime score. The next Borah first down came on a penalty against the Bruins.

The in the late third and early fourth quarters, the Lions put together a couple of scoring drives from midfield.

Coach Bill Jones was distressed by his Bruins' largesse.

"We didn't deserve this... to have it appear we played as poorly as this," he said. "We didn't deserve to put the ball on the ground three times like we did in the last six or seven minutes."

"The score is 55-0 and we played a damn good defensive game for three quarters."

Twin Falls moved the ball hardly at all on the ground but did get some passing going in the late second quarter to mount two threats. Neither came to anything, although the Bruins fans lost their big moment to cheer when it was ruled Shane Cole had caught a pass beyond the endzone stripe.

"Borah surprised us a little with their pass defense," Jones said. "It was a lot better than we thought. We thought we could pick up some yards on them with our short pass series. But unless you can get the running game going, you can't pass either."

That the Bruins were more than nervous going into the game became apparent when they fumbled the center snap two of the first three times.

"The kind of start didn't help," said Jones.

But the teams exchanged punts and the first disaster didn't hit the Bruins until punter Mike Rice "felt pressure" and tried to run instead of kick. He was knocked down at the four and two plays later Gregg Harrison punted across from the one. Mark Jensen converted.

The Bruins had a chance minutes later when Virgil Hurt recovered a muffed punt by Borah at the 47. But three plays later, Robb Warwick picked off a pass into the flat and zipped 48 yards to score. Three plays after the kickoff, Warwick, who was defending against Steve Galley evidently, picked off another pass on the other side of the field and went 45 yards to turn it into an insurmountable 21-0 lead.

A third pass interception by Steve Caven lead to Borah's only second-quarter score. Caven returned the ball to the Bruin 34 and two plays later Bob Wheeler flipped a little jumper to Ed Teets and he turned it into a 33-yard run to the one. That marked Borah's only first down of the half. Mark Tidd went over from there.

After that, Twin Falls' used up the half getting several first downs on passes, largely to Galley but once in a while to Brett Semple, but couldn't get past the Borah 20.

Twin Falls gambled on a fourth and one at midfield midway through the third quarter and Borah held. From then, helped by a 15-yard penalty, Borah put together its first drive of the night. The payoff came on a good 23-yard run by Harrison, one of the state's fastest track sprinters.

Twin Falls High receiver Brett Semple advances a pass as Borah defender Scott Malmstrom closes in for the tackle

That brought up the fourth quarter and a total collapse by the Bruin offense.

After taking a punt the Lions unreeled another drive, Harrison getting much of it on a 20-yard dash to the Twin Falls 16. The Lions just beat a fourth and inches by one inch at the six and two plays after that Martin Grigsby went off tackle for the score.

Twin Falls fumbled on the first play at its 20 but got the ball back on an interception — only to fumble it away at the 12 after one first down. Tidd carried three straight times, going over from the two on the last one.

Again Twin Falls lost the ball on the first play, the trailing back dropping a good pitch at the 28. It finally went to fourth and six at the Bruin eight but Dave Thornton picked it all up on a point-closing romp.

Montreal's Steve Rogers celebrates complete game victory

Rogers, White put Expos 1 up on LA

MONTREAL (UPI) — A No. 1 pitcher and a fourth outfielder added up to success for the Montreal Expos Friday night and put the Los Angeles Dodgers on the verge of being subtracted from the National League Championship Series.

The Expos, riding the continued October grit of Steve Rogers and the home-run power of Jerry White, moved to within one victory of their first-ever pennant with a 4-1 triumph over the Dodgers and a 2-1 lead in the series.

"The evidence is clearly on the table," said Montreal Manager Jim Fanning, referring to his ace right-hander. "That's the fourth outstanding game in a row for Steve Rogers. He's performed so well it would be difficult to describe how well he's pitched."

Fanning also acknowledged the talent of White, who is believed in Montreal to be one of the best fourth outfielders around.

"He rises to the occasion," said Fanning. "Those who have been around here see how many big hits he gets. With Tim Lincecum being hurt, he had a chance to play a lot in the last four weeks."

The combination left Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda in a snappy mood. When asked what effect the weather had on the game, he said, "It had absolutely no effect whatsoever."

Requested to throw a key to the game, he shot back, "You saw it. We got two outs and nobody on and they scored four runs."

The victory left the Expos in a much better mood and White explained that he was patient with his role as the fourth outfielder.

"Everybody wants to play every day but there are three good outfielders here ahead of me," he said. "I know that Dick (former manager Williams) liked to stick with his nine and the only time I would get in was for pinch hitting."

White, who hit only three homers during the regular season, said the shot was probably his biggest thrill as an Expo.

"I thought it was going to hit the wall," he said, adding that when it went out of the park, "I knew Steve was pitching good and it would be enough to win the game. We wanted to win this game and get it (the series) out of the way tomorrow."

Rogers said that he tried to capitalize on his experience in the critical outing.

"I think more than anything when you work for eight or nine years and have a chance to work in this kind of a game, you remember how hard you worked to get there."

"The weather was really nice tonight. If you were out here in April when they thawed out the infield with blow torches, now that's cold."

Rogers, the Expos' ace, upped his October record to 4-0 with a seven-inning and White backed him with a three-run shot that capped a four-run sixth inning.

A pennant-starving crowd of 54,372 cheered enthusiastically as the Expos spotted the Dodgers a 1-0 lead in the fourth while receiving superior defensive play from second baseman Rodney Scott and renewed offensive output by Andrew Dawson.

For 5 1/2 innings, the game proceeded just the way it was billed — as a duel between two talented and hot pitchers.

Hargers, who defeated the New York Mets on the last weekend of the regular season to virtually assure the Expos of the second-half title and then outdueling Philadelphia's Steve Carlton twice in the mini-playoffs, did not appear to have his best stuff and allowed at least one baserunner in each of the first six innings.

The Dodgers did manage to score in the fourth, but it was perhaps their failure to break the game open that cost them their shot.

Dusty Baker led off with a single and advanced to third when Steve Garvey executed a hit-and-run single to right. Rogers induced Ron Cey to bounce to third, producing the run, but Pedro Guerrero and Mike Scioscia were easy outs. It proved to be the Dodgers' last opportunity to control the game.

Rogers, 31, who once was considered a risk in pressure games, received a double play from his infield in the fifth, allowed Garvey to reach

Yankees showing signs of being primed for World Series

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — The New York Yankees are fighting among themselves again, which is a sure sign they're going to be extra tough to beat in the World Series.

The Yankees had plenty of inner turmoil during their world championship seasons of 1977 and 1978 and one of the principal antagonists during those years — Reggie Jackson — is at the center of the latest battle.

Jackson, the Yankees' slugging outfielder, and third baseman Graig Nettles were involved in an altercation at the team's American League pennant-clinching party Thursday night. The two got into a fight when Nettles bawled out Jackson for bringing a group of his friends to the party that was supposed to be only for players and their families.

According to eyewitnesses, Nettles punched Jackson in the face after Jackson had knocked a beer bottle from Nettles' hand.

George Steinbrenner, the Yankees' principal owner, shrugged off the incident as "nothing more than a shoving match." But sources close to the team say there had been bad blood between Jackson and Nettles for some time.

No matter. The Yankees have thrived on controversy since Jackson arrived on the scene five years ago and these things only seem to make the team tougher. For one thing, the Yankees keep all such squabbles "in the family."

"I hear no evil, see no evil and speak no evil," outfielder Dave Winfield said Thursday night when questioned about the Jackson-Nettles skirmish.

Heck, you don't have to like each other to play good baseball together. Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig didn't speak to each other for a number of years over some petty misunderstanding yet that didn't prevent them from being one of the most productive tandems of all time. The same was true of Joe Tinker and Johnny Evers, the best double play combination of the dead-ball era.

The Yankees flew home Friday to await the outcome of the National League Championship Series between Los Angeles and Montreal and the new AL champions were brimming with confidence about next week's World Series.

Their faith is based on their many years of experience in post-season competition and the fact that their bullpen strength is unequalled in baseball circles. Led by Ron Davis and Rich Gossage, the Yankees bullpen has allowed only one earned run in 29 2/3 innings of post-season play.

"You've got to get an early lead against them," said Matt Keough, the losing pitcher for the Oakland A's in the final game of the AL Championship Series Thursday night. "That's the way to beat them. You've got to get ahead and stay on top because of their bullpen. You can't let them have a big inning."

Yankee manager Bob Lemon has a tried-and-true formula for success in the post-season games. All he asks is six good innings from his starters before turning the reins over to his bullpen corps.

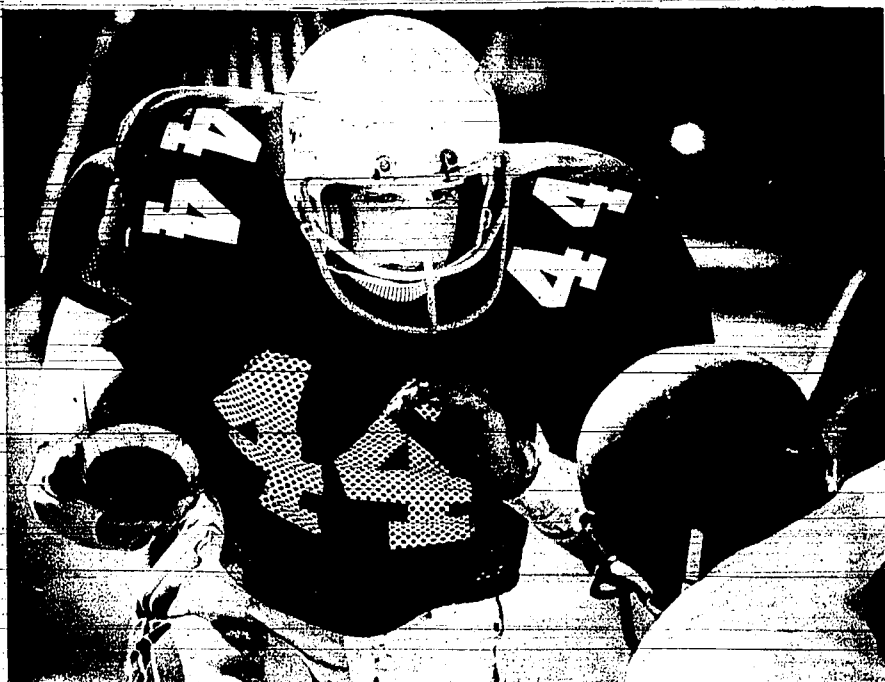

"I play a six-inning game because of our two horses," said pitcher Dave Righetti, the winner in New York's 4-0 triumph Thursday night. "At first, I didn't like it, but we got the big guy (Gossage) out there."

The Yankees also point to their vast experience as a reason for their post-season success. Most of the club has played in post-season championship competition before and realizes they aren't just everyday games.

"When I hear a player say that a Championship Series or a World Series game is just another ballgame once the first pitch is thrown," said Jackson, "I say to myself, 'You've got problems, son.' So, too, will the Yankees' opposition in the World Series."

Oakley's senior fullback, Stuart Johnson, prepares to shed a Mackay tackler on his way to a big gain during the first quarter

Finishes 5-0 in Magic Valley Conference

Oakley romps past Mackay

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

OAKLEY The Oakley Hornets took care of the outcome early and coasted into their first Magic Valley Conference title in a decade Friday.

The Hornets, striking for two touchdowns in the first seven minutes of the game, routed the Mackay Miners 38-6 to complete an undefeated conference schedule. The result gave them sole possession of the title and the defending trip to the first state A football playoffs ever offered.

Oakley, which has lost a pair of non-conference games and faces Valley in the season finale next week, will open the playoffs on the road, probably against highly-regarded Nampa Christian.

Although Oakley was never in danger of losing this one, after the second touchdown it appeared the Hornets did lose a lot of interest in the game. The fact wasn't lost on Coach Doug Bailey.

"Yes," he said, "I think we did have a letdown (after the early and easy scores). We've been fighting complacency all week because the players knew they had things pretty well in hand and regardless of what happened they would be going to state. But in the second half they got their heads back up and played good football again."

Bailey also was thankful that Valley remained on the schedule. Oakley's state title this year was a blessing in one regard and perhaps a detriment in another. The Hornets played what proved to be their toughest two games right out of the starting blocks. The last two were against the last two clubs in the league.

Bailey noted it helped from an injury standpoint — of being able to hold some players out to heal completely. But he also worried about a little sloppiness creeping into the Hornets execution.

"It's definitely going to help to play Valley next week," he said. "They are a very, very good ball club and that should help us get our edge back whether we win or lose."

The compliment earlier had been returned by Scott Tingey, Valley assistant who was scouting with Coach Forrest Fennesbeck.

"With the possible exception of Gooding, this (Oakley) is the best executing team I've seen this year," Tingey said.

It took Oakley less than three minutes to take the opening kickoff and move into the lead. A couple of sweeps and a pass carried to the 11-yard line and to Rex Tolman, a combination that was to haunt the Miners all day.

Mackay's only reasonable scoring chance came in the late first quarter when Kirk Drussel blocked a punt to set the Miners up at the Oakley 38. But Oakley's defense stopped that right there.

Meanwhile, Oakley's offense spluttered and did little until a punt roughing call kept a drive alive at midfield late in the first half. With 10 seconds left, the Cranney to Tolman combination struck for 36 yards and an 18-0 halftime lead.

A pass interference call kept an early second-half Oakley drive going and that culminated in a 22-yard pass to Tolman. Johnson ran the two-point across. Just five minutes later, Cranney rolled out for 26 yards.

After that Oakley went strictly with reserves. Two plays into the final period, Lindsey Allard recovered a fumble at the Mackay 30 and the second unit took it in almost immediately. Setting it up was a 28-yard pass from Kerry Morrison to Gus Goringe, who did most of it by slipping two tacklers and moving to the one. Tony Barcola belted in from there.

Nothing happened after that — except Oakley was always in Mackay's territory — until the final three minutes when Miner Marty James, using a stiff arm to sweep aside the last defender, sprang loose to ramble 64 yards and break the shutout.

Machurek out with mononucleosis

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — Quarterback Mike Machurek will miss today's Big Sky Conference football game at Montana because he has mononucleosis, Idaho State Coach Dave Krugthorpe said Friday night.

Instead fifth-year senior Dirk Koetter, who was the Bengals' starting signal caller as a sophomore in 1979, will make his first start in two years, Krugthorpe said.

The coach said he has confidence in the 6-1, 175-pound Koetter, and plans no strategy changes. He added he can always call on a third senior quarterback, Keith Simons.

The 6-2, 210-pound Machurek has had "a mild case" of mono for about two weeks and played with it for at least one game. Krugthorpe said Machurek was checked by a doctor Thursday after a sore throat failed to improve. Krugthorpe said.

The coach did not say how long he expects Machurek to be out of action.

Machurek stayed in Pocatello for the weekend. Machurek has thrown for 13 touchdowns and is leading the conference in passing and total offense.

Basketball officiating meetings set

TWIN FALLS — A special Ed Trexler, mechanics session will feature pre-season training of Fourth District Basketball Officials Association members.

Paul Ostyn, Twin Falls, district commissioner, said the Trexler clinics will be held at 7 p.m. Nov. 13 and 9 a.m. Nov. 14 at O'Leary Junior High School. Ostyn said all those certifying will be expected to attend those sessions.

There is one other "must attend" meeting which will precede the clinic. It is for all officials at 7 p.m. Monday at Twin Falls High School. Chuck Kingston of the Idaho High School Activities Association will be on hand to explain new rule changes and interpretations.

A second meeting, slated for 7 p.m. Nov. 4 at Burley High School, will review old rules, local rules and regulations. During that meeting the first women's basketball assignments will be passed out.

Couples tops tourney; Watson falters

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Rookie Fred Couples grabbed the second-round lead of the $300,000 Pensacola Open Friday with a seven-under-par 65 and veteran Tom Watson, the opening-day leader, struggled to a 76 to fall well off the pace.

Added to his first-day 66, Couples' round — which included six birdies, an eagle and only one bogey — gave him an 11-under-par 133 total for 36 holes and a one-shot lead over Ed Furl and Howard Twitty.

Fiori toured the 7,133-yard Perfidio Bay course in 66 Friday and Twitty had a 67 to tie him at 134.

It took a 36-hole total of 142, two strokes under par, to make the cut for the final two rounds today and Sunday and Watson, who led Thursday's opening round with an eight-under-par 64, made it by two strokes with a 140.

Violations end Garden Valley season

GARDEN VALLEY (UPI) — Garden Valley High School's football season has been cut short because seven players were dismissed for disciplinary reasons, causing the team to forfeit its remaining two games.

"We were down to about five kids with experience and would have had to use young freshmen, and we didn't think it advisable," Principal Clark Gardner said Thursday night.

Gardner said the seven players were kicked off the team this week for "violation of school policies."

By forfeiting games to Cascade and Meadows Valley, Garden Valley finished its Long Pin Conference season with a 4-2 record.

Madlock signs, OKs weight clause

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Pirates announced Friday they have signed third baseman Bill Madlock to a six-year contract, preventing the three-time National League batting champion from leaving in the free agent draft.

No monetary terms of the deal were disclosed but both sides said the pact contains a weight clause for Madlock, 30, an obvious attempt by the ballclub to avoid a situation similar to Dave Parker's three years ago.

Parker was signed to a five-year, multimillion-dollar contract in January 1978 after winning his second straight batting title, but his weight ballooned, a knee problem flared and he has not played up to that caliber since.

BSU's Woods invited to bowl contest

BOISE (UPI) — Boise State safety and kick returner Rick Woods has been invited to play in the Olympic Gold Bowl football game in January. It has been announced.

George Allen, former coach of the NFL's Washington Redskins and Los Angeles Rams, headed the committee that chose 66 college players to take part in the game Jan. 16 at San Diego.

Woods, a senior and a two-time All-Big Sky Conference strong safety, has 38 tackles, three pass interceptions and four pass deflections this season. He also has returned 19 punts for 183 yards, a 9.7-yards-per-return average.

Ferragamo demoted

TORONTO (UPI) — Vince Ferragamo's multi-million dollar journey has reached football's equivalent of limbo land.

The Montreal Alouettes traveled to Toronto Friday to prepare for their game against the Argonauts today, but they left the highest paid player in the history of the Canadian Football League behind on the taxi squad.

Alouette head coach Jim Eddy said he grew impatient waiting for Ferragamo to produce the wide-open offense that had been expected of him.

The battle for the No. 1 ranking continues

Texas attempts to hang on to the top spot

By RICHARD ROSENBLATT
UPI Sports Writer

The University of Texas would like to put some stability into the No. 1 rating.

The Longhorns, the fourth team this season to hold down the top spot, can go a long way in entangling themselves there with a victory over Arkansas today at Fayetteville in a pivotal Southwest Conference game.

"I hope the No. 1 rating boosts our players' confidence," said Texas Coach and former Arkansas alumnus Fred Akers. "We'll need just as good a game, if not better, from our players Saturday than we had last week against Oklahoma."

Although Akers was impressed with his team's 34-14 triumph over the fumbling Sooners, he says the Arkansas game is even more important.

"Our game with Oklahoma is always of national interest and has a bearing on the ratings," said Akers. "But our game with Arkansas is even more crucial because it is a league game and can mean a lot in determining the league champion."

Texas, rated No. 3 last week, bulled its way past No. 2 Penn State as the Longhorns replaced Southern California as No. 1. The Trojans, now rated sixth, held the No. 1 position for three weeks before losing to Arizona 13-10 and try to rebound today against Stanford.

Michigan, the pre-season choice as the best team in the country, is riding a four-game winning streak after losing to Wisconsin.

In other games involving the Top 10, Penn State is at Syracuse, No. 3 Pittsburgh hosts No. 10 Florida State. No. 4 North Carolina is at North Carolina State. No. 7 Clemson travels to Duke. No. 8 Missouri is at No. 17 Iowa State and No. 9 Georgia is at Vanderbilt.

Second-ranked Nittany Lions try to move up

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — Coach Joe Paterno could care less, but his players at Penn State are a little miffed they were bypassed for the No. 1 spot in the national rankings this week.

With the coaches' votes still stinging a little, the second-ranked Nittany Lions meet Syracuse in the Carrier Dome Saturday looking for their fifth straight victory.

It's not exactly a team with a mission, but the Lions noticed that Texas leapfrogged from third place over them to the top rung following Southern California's fall from the No. 1 ranking last weekend.

"It's not the type of thing we're wrapped up in," guard and tri-captain Sean Farrell said. "I think the fans are more wrapped up in it than we are. But it's a little something, a little ego boost."

"And we felt it was rightfully ours. We were No. 2 and we should have moved up."

Another tri-captain, linebacker Chet Parlavacchio, wants to make sure that his teammates don't lose sight of their long-range goals. "If we go undefeated, the record speaks for itself," he said. "As a captain, it's my job to keep things in perspective. There are still too many football games left, too many chances to slip up."

Paterno's response to the voters' snub of the Nittany Lions was predictable: "What do I care if we're No. 1? No. 2 or No. 8 or No. 9 right now? We can't worry about that. I'm only worried about Syracuse."

The Orangemen are 1-3. They had last week off after playing Maryland to a 17-17 tie on a touchdown pass from Dave Warner to Willie Sydnor and a two-point conversion with 16 seconds to play.

Syracuse hasn't beaten the Lions since a 24-7 victory in 1970, and they'll have to find a way to stop Curt Warner and the improving Penn State passing attack to break that 10-game losing streak.

Big 10 Conference teams display new balance of power

CHICAGO (UPI) — For the past several years, Big Ten football coaches have been claiming the days of the "big two" and "little eight" have passed.

But every year, either Michigan and Ohio State clinched another league title and Rose Bowl berth while the rest of the conference regrouped for another crack at the perennial powers.

Halfway through the 1981 season, it appeared the claim of the also-rans may have come true. In fact, the Big Ten trend may be mirroring one taking place across the entire country.

While Michigan and Ohio State aren't out of the title picture, teams like Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois were still in the thick of the title fight at a time when both are usually looking for their first or second win of the season.

The general consensus is that parity is being achieved through increased scholarship limitations. The so-called 30-95 rule, prohibiting the awarding of more than 30 scholarships per year or 95 on the entire team, is being credited for the balance not only in the Big Ten but across the country.

"Look at the rankings. See how many new teams are there," said Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke. "You see a Clemson, an SMU, Miami, Mississippi State and of course in our conference, Iowa and Wisconsin."

Duke said it took several years for

... prefers parity

the impact of the limited scholarship rule to take effect.

"You're looking at more balance."

"You can't stockpile players anymore," Duke said.

In addition to more upsets, there have been fewer one-sided games in the Big Ten and across the country, Duke said.

"You aren't going to be able to just come in and run through a team. It's going to happen every once in a while, but I think you won't see it as common as in the past," Duke said.

Michigan Coach Bo Schembeler said the days are gone when the Wolverines could, in effect, win by just showing. And, despite the chance his team will lose more football games, he prefers the current situation.

"It was hard sometimes when you were such a prohibitive power to get much enjoyment out of some of the wins," Schembeler explained. "Now, you never know what's going to happen. We were ecstatic after our wins over Indiana and Michigan State. It's more meaningful now."

Schembeler agreed the scholarship limitations were a factor but added there may be less high school talent to go around at present because of declining high school enrollments.

"There are not as many top players around. In the 1970s, we could be strong at some positions but now we find that we are going with some players who wouldn't have made our team in the past," Schembeler said. Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce said because of the "evening out" process, he has had to play younger, smaller players than in the past.

"We are cut short without big people," Bruce explained. "On any Saturday, anything could happen good or bad to a team."

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry, who is close to giving the Hawkeyes their first above .500 season in two decades, said the balance is the best tonic for college football.

"It's a great thing for college football," said Fry, whose team knocked off Nebraska and UCLA early in the year. "We needed it in college football for years and years."

Fry said when he came to Iowa three years ago, he had a "master plan" to revitalize Hawkeye football.

"But I'd have to say that we're ahead of schedule," Fry added.

Rookie Notre Dame Coach Gerry Faust, whose team lost three of its first five games for its worst start in 18 years, said the balancing has been a long time coming.

"This isn't happening overnight. You can see that there are some outstanding football programs all over the country, not just with the superpowers," Faust said. "The scholarship limitation is a big thing. You have to be selective in who you can recruit. If you get some injuries early on, you could be in trouble as the season goes on."

One program that hasn't reaped the benefits of the parity trend is Northwestern, which is nearing the NCAA record for most consecutive defeats.

But first-year Coach Dennis Green said it is only a matter of time before some of the schools that are perennial losers catch up.

USC needs victory over Stanford today to maintain Pac-10 championship hopes

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The University of Southern California and Stanford, two bitter Pacific-10 Conference rivals with a history of close games, meet today at the Coliseum in a match that could be the pivotal contest of the year for both schools.

The sixth-ranked Trojans, who lost their No. 1 rating and dropped to a 4-1 record in a stunning 13-10 loss to Arizona on the same field last weekend, hope to keep get their offense untracked and stay in the race for the national championship.

The Cardinals, who upset UCLA for their first triumph after four losses at the start of the season, are trying to stay in the race for the Pac-10 title and the Rose Bowl with a group of schools including both the Trojans and Bruins.

Despite their status as a 14-point favorite, the Trojans have to beat Stanford before a Homecoming crowd to have more than the slimmest of hopes for a spot in the 1982 Rose Bowl.

"Simply put, we have to win all our conference games again to go to the Rose Bowl, although every game from now on will be very tough for us," USC Coach John Robinson said.

Today's game matches USC's Marcus Allen and Stanford's Darrin Nelson, two of the greatest running backs in Pac-10 history. The two runners moved up to fourth and fifth in the league's all-time rushing ranks last week and are almost sure to end up second and third behind USC's Charles White.

Nelson, who made the winning 2-yard TD dive with 46 seconds left to play, now has 3,467 rushing yards in his career.

John Elway, the Cardinals' heralded quarterback, has recovered from the sprained ankle that plagued him the first three weeks of the season. Despite the painful injury, he completed 33-of-45 passes for 418 yards against Purdue and 28-of-42 for 249 yards against Ohio State.

Chiefs battle Broncos for AFC West lead

By IRA KAUFMAN
UPI Sports Writer

An early-season shutdown in the AFC West is one of the highlights of this week's NFL schedule, but who could have predicted neither the San Diego Chargers nor the Super Bowl champion Oakland Raiders would be involved?

The Denver Broncos, led by the individual success story of 1981, and the Kansas City Chiefs — a pair of 8-8 clubs — are the only teams in the division that have not lost a game in the last two weeks.

Under rookie Coach Dan Reeves, the Broncos, 5-1, sit alone atop one of pro football's most rugged divisions and they boast a very strong early candidate for AFC Player of the Year honors in 38-year-old quarterback Craig Morton, who is one year older than Reeves. Morton, who turns back young challengers for his starting spot every season, is the NFL's top passer with 1,354 yards and 13 touchdown passes on only 130 attempts.

The Chiefs, 4-2, share the second-place spot with the Chargers and are in the midst of a make-or-break four-game stretch. Kansas City comes off one of the club's best efforts in a decade, a 27-0 drubbing of the suddenly impotent Raiders, and the Chiefs play in Oakland and San Diego the next two weeks.

"Yes, we're serious about it," says Kansas City Coach Marv Levy of his club's hopes for its first post-season berth since 1971. "I hope we're serious about being a playoff contender. It's going to be a heckuva race."

It already is.

The Broncos look like they're for real, leading the league in "total" defense — although Reeves made his reputation as an offensive innovator while serving as an assistant for Dallas Coach Tom Landry. Besides Morton's unexpected heroics, the Broncos have unveiled a very dangerous wide receiver in Steve Watson, who already has three 100-yard games. Watson has caught 24 passes for a sparkling 24-yard average and has notched seven TD receptions.

"Denver has been playing well right along the entire season," said Levy, who has kept the Chiefs in the division race despite a rash of injuries. "They are an excellent football team and it will be a tough game for us. We will have to play well in all three areas — offense, defense and special teams — to be in it."

The Chiefs, who swept the Broncos in 1980, have been sparked by the elusive running of rookie Joe Delaney, who has rushed for 418 yards and is also an excellent receiver out of the backfield. Kicker Nick Lowery leads the AFC in scoring and quarterback Bill Kenney comes off an impressive 287-yard, two-touchdown performance against the Raiders.

Kansas City, however, is decimated by injuries: All-Pro defensive end Art Still is still an injured reserve; running back Ted McKnight may be out for the year with a knee injury; and starting linebackers Thomas Howard and Frank Manumaleuga are also sidelined.

Elsewhere Sunday, Tampa Bay is at Oakland, Buffalo at the New York Jets, Houston at New England, Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, San Diego at Baltimore, unbeaten Philadelphia at Minnesota, St. Louis at Atlanta, San Francisco vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, New Orleans at Cleveland, the New York Giants at Seattle, Washington at Miami and Los Angeles at Dallas in a nationally televised night contest. Chicago is at Detroit Monday night.

The Raiders, 2-4, have inexplicably been shut out three straight games and have scored the fewest points (63) in the NFL. Coach Tom Flores has announced third-year pro Marc Wilson will start ahead of Super Bowl hero Jim Plunkett at quarterback and the offensive line will also be shaken up. Tampa Bay, 4-2, shares the NFC Central lead with Minnesota and the Buccaneers' opportunistic defense — which ranked No. 1 in the league two years ago before slipping badly in 1980 — has been performing up to old standards. The club has posted eight interceptions over the last two games and has 12 on the season.

Buffalo, 4-2, is a half-game behind Miami in the AFC East and the Bills can't afford to look past the Jets toward next week's game against Denver. New York, 2-3-1, will be motivated by its humiliating 31-0 defeat in Buffalo on Opening Day, but the Jets have lost five straight to their division rivals. The Jets lead the league with 25 sacks, but the Bills' offensive line has allowed an NFL-low three sacks, giving Joe Ferguson ample time to throw 14 TD passes.

Improving Minnesota hosts unbeaten Philly

Vikings' Kramer would gladly accept Eagles' repayment of turnovers

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — The Minnesota Vikings didn't have to study too hard for Sunday's game against the Philadelphia Eagles.

The Vikings' notes from last year's NFC playoff game, which the Eagles won 31-16, is still fresh in their minds. But Minnesota Coach Bud Grant says his team won't use the loss as incentive.

"With all those turnovers in that game, it's one we'd just as soon forget," he said.

"Philadelphia could repay us a debt," he said. "With the number of fumbles we had, they could pay us back and we'd be glad to accept."

Minnesota quarterback Tommy Kramer was intercepted five times and the Vikings lost three fumbles in the loss, which helped Philadelphia on its road-to-the-Super-Bowl-against-eventual winner Oakland.

Philadelphia also beat Minnesota 42-7 during the regular season last year as halfback Wilbert Montgomery rushed for 169 yards and quarterback

Ron Jaworski threw for 274 yards.

But that was last year. The current Eagles are unbeaten at 6-0 and fly into Met Stadium against Minnesota, which is 4-2 after a 33-31 victory over San Diego on a last-second field goal.

"I'd rather be 6-0 than 4-2," Philadelphia Coach Dick Vermeil said. "I think we have a real edge from week to week, striving to do something we've never done before and that's win seven in a row. Then eight in a row."

The Eagles' not only have a mental edge, but physical as well, Grant said.

"Their defense, by all standards, is much better than before," he said. "Philadelphia is a great ball-control type of team. They're not worried about getting 200 or 400 yards offensively, like San Diego."

The Eagles rank seventh in total offense and third in total defense in the NFC, while the Vikings are first in total offense and 11th in total defense.

Jaworski and Kramer have almost identical statistics, although Kramer has the edge in yardage and touchdowns. Jaworski, rated fifth in the NFC, has completed 93-of-163 attempts for 1,068 yards while Kramer, who is ranked No. 2, has hit 91-of-157 throws for 1,253 yards.

Kramer's 444 yards passing against the Chargers is the most by an NFC quarterback this year and the former Rice signal-caller has shown no signs of ill effects after his knee injury. Since he has returned to the lineup, the Vikings are 4-0.

Three Minnesota players caught passes for more than 100 yards each, including tight end Joe Sener, wide receiver Terry LeCount and running back Ted Brown, but it was Ahmad Rashad's three catches that placed him first as the team's all-time leading receiver. Rashad now has 339 receptions, compared to the former best of 336 held by Chuck Foreman, and has caught at least one pass in 67 consecutive games.

The Eagles are coming off Vermeil's 50th career NFL win, a 31-14 victory over the New Orleans Saints fueled by Jaworski's 424 yards passing and three touchdowns. Although Vermeil said he was not pleased with the offense's second-half performance, he praised the defense — especially defensive end Carl Hairston.

"Not enough can be said about what kind of football player he is," Vermeil said of the six-year veteran. "I think he embarrassed some other people on defense because he was so much more intense, so much more a true Eagle player."

Hairston, who joins end Dennis Harrison and guard Charlie Johnson in the Eagles' 3-4 defense, had three sacks, eight solo tackles, three assists and two deflected passes against New Orleans.

Tight end Keith Krepke and backup John Spagnola are questionable for Sunday's game, so Vermeil said he will go with No. 2 fullback Booker healthy, which is bad news for the Vikings. The 6-foot-8, 11-year veteran caught 12 passes for 175 yards in the two teams' two meetings last year and has 19 catches this season.

Recevier Harold Carmichael is

Philadelphia "does" not rely on Jaworski's passing alone. Montgomery is averaging 5.1 yards per carry and has rushed for 473 yards on 93 runs.

Will lowly Seahawks find a running attack?

SEATTLE (UPI) — The New York Giants finally found a running attack a week ago. Will the Seattle Seahawks discover one of their own this weekend?

The Giants, 3-3, and the Seahawks, 1-5, the two least productive running teams in the NFL, meet Sunday in an inter-conference game in the Kingdom.

In Phil Simms and Jim Zorn, New York and Seattle have two of the better young quarterbacks in the league. But it's something of a question whether the two teams rely so much on their passing game out of preference or sheer necessity.

In an obvious effort to bolster their rushing attack, both teams have been shopping around for running backs this season.

The Giants look like they got lucky with the acquisition of Rob Carpenter. After four years in Houston, where he was overshadowed by Earl Campbell, Carpenter was dealt to the Giants and made an auspicious debut last week by gaining 103 yards on just 14 carries.

New York Coach Ray Perkins said last week's 34-14 rout of the St. Louis Cardinals was New York's best game in his three-year tenure at the Giants' helm. The Giants rushed for 198 yards in the game, which was about 125 yards above their season average.

Carpenter received an ovation from the run-starved crowd at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford last Sunday before he even carried the football.

If revitalizing a rushing attack is all it takes, the Seahawks have two candidates of their own for instant folk hero status — Horace Ivory and Theotis Brown.

The speedy Ivory, who doubled as a running back and kick returner for the New England Patriots in the past, has been recovering from a hamstring injury since he was acquired by Seattle a few weeks ago. Ivory worked out with the Seahawks this week and is "listed as probable" for the Giants' game.

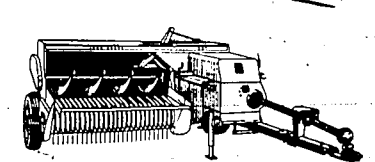

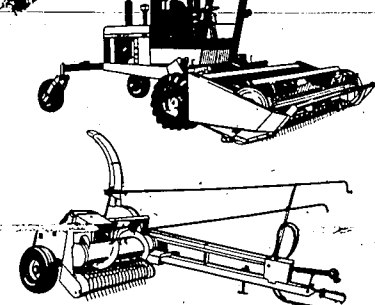

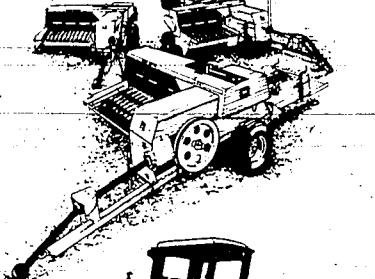

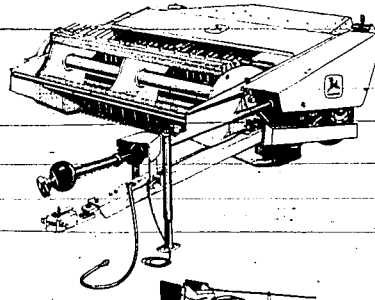

The Seahawks gave up two draft choices to pick up Brown from the St. Louis Cardinals just before the trading deadline Tuesday. Now in his third season, Brown played in the shadow of Otis Anderson ever since they were drafted in the first two rounds by the Cardinals in 1979.

At 6-foot-2 and 225 pounds, Brown has the size to play fullback, as he did for the Cardinals. But Seattle Coach Jack Patera said he likes Brown's range of talents, particularly his pass-catching ability, and will take a look at the former UCLA star at tailback initially.

The starter at that position is six-year veteran Sherman Smith, who has yet to prove he can run as well as he did before a serious knee injury last season. Smith has only 141 yards and a 3.5 average so far in 1981.

A measure of Seattle's ineffectiveness running the ball is that fact that Zorn is the team's second-leading rusher. Their inability to run has been most apparent in several critical failures at the goal line this year. Overall, the Seahawks have rushed for just 502 yards in six games — worst in the NFL.

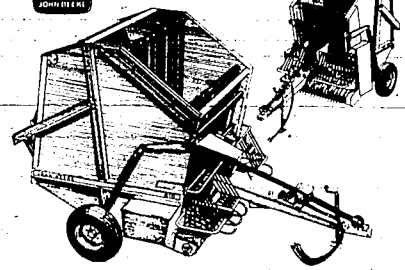

Patera admittedly is puzzled about why the Seattle offense, which was the team's salvation in its early years, is failing him now. Seattle's six-game point total of 85 is third worst in the NFL behind Oakland and New Orleans.

Doctor disputes lead tests

BOISE (UPI) — A Kellogg doctor working as a consultant for Bunker Hill Co. said nine children involved in a $20-million suit are normal — and no other North Idaho boys and girls he examined suffer from lead poisoning.

Dr. Ronald Panke told U.S. District Court jurors Thursday that he has never seen a case of lead poisoning in the Silver Valley.

But when the attorney for the children, Paul Whelan, attempted to introduce evidence concerning brain damage allegedly suffered by other North Idaho children as a result of lead exposure, Judge Ray McNichols stopped Panke from answering.

A 1981 study of 11 Kellogg children showed seven with brain impairment — and six of the 11 had evidence of mild to moderate organic brain damage, Whelan said in the absence of the jury. He also said three had abnormal nerve conduction, and another two had deviations in their IQs.

The Seattle attorney made the comments in an attempt to refute Panke's testimony, which was made voluntarily on behalf of Bunker Hill. Panke also said he's earned more than $30,000 from Bunker Hill by acting as a consultant in the lead-poisoning case — and has attended classes and seminars at the expense of Bunker Hill's law firm.

Jurors considering the lawsuit must decide if the nine children sustained permanent physical and mental handicaps as a result of exposure to emissions from the Bunker Hill lead smelter.

While Panke said none of the boys and girls sustained lead poisoning, he admitted that nine out of every 10 children attending the Silver Valley Elementary School showed urine-lead levels in excess of 80 in 1972 tests.

While federal officials believe that a reading of 80 or higher should cause concern, Panke said he did not believe levels as high as 150-160 were necessarily dangerous.

He also said that at least one of the nine children — Arlene Yoss — exhibited signs of "undue lead absorption" when she was admitted to a hospital. "You say you have never seen a case of lead poisoning and that even Arlene Yoss, according to your statement, was not poisoned when she went to the hospital," and "could barely hold her head up?" Whelan asked in cross-examining Panke.

"I didn't think she was lead poisoned," Panke responded. "Do you think she had undue lead absorption?" Whelan asked.

"I do." "And who made up that euphemism?" Whelan asked. "I don't think anybody made it up. It's a medical term," Panke said.

Panke also testified he had been hired by Bunker Hill to work on an on-going study of lead levels in Kellogg children, and that the nine children involved in the litigation had been excluded from further testing.

He also said that study indicated none of the children tested had abnormalities — and Whelan challenged the statement.

But when Whelan attempted to ask about the 1981 study of 11 other Kellogg children, Bunker Hill's attorney, John Layman, objected, and the judge sent jurors out of the courtroom.

Layman said Whelan was attempting to "infer to evidence" that the nine plaintiffs' lead-poisoning claims were valid because 11 other children also suffered similar problems.

"It's worse than hearsay, it's worse than assertion of facts not in evidence," Layman said in successfully arguing against admitting the question.

"It's prejudicial and can't be cured. We're back where we were trying to find the condition of these children. If we bring in 11 more, the case is going to go all over the place."

While McNichols said he believed the new evidence would be valuable to the jury, he said the information could not be admitted.

"It's value here for the jury is outweighed by potential prejudice and problems," the judge said.

Pocatello teachers seek talks mediator

POCATELLO (UPI) — A one-month contract talks for a new teachers' contract in Pocatello has ended with no agreement, and the union is asking for a mediator.

Negotiations designed to break the stalemate will be supervised Monday by Thomas A. Curdie, Salt Lake City, of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, negotiators said.

The chief negotiator for the Pocatello Education Association said Thursday teachers didn't plan to go on strike. Ray Swigert said teachers would use other options to reach an agreement.

School board negotiator Sandra Gayon said teachers refused in September to accept what the board said was its final offer, an 8.3 percent salary hike.

Talks over the salary and benefits dispute broke off Sept. 15 after 22 negotiating sessions — the first of which was held in April.

Hecla ends mine bailout talks, chance

KRIEGER, Idaho (UPI) — The president of Hecla Mining Co. says his firm has shut off discussion on the possible purchase of the Bunker Hill mine and smelter, which are scheduled to close by the middle of November.

Griffith said Thursday his company had been participating in talks with various "interested parties" during recent months to explore ideas "which might facilitate the continued operation of Bunker Hill's metallurgical facilities and mine."

"Hecla's interest in the continued operation of the Bunker Hill Co. stems both from our concern for the economy of the Silver Valley and our current reliance upon the Bunker Hill Co. as the major purchaser of Hecla's concentrates," he said.

But Griffith said, "These discussions were predicated on the assumption that a potentially profitable operation could be fashioned from several segments of Bunker Hill Co.'s assets."

He said that operation would have to include another "major company" knowledgeable in the smelting business and be able to contribute significant capital and concentrate tonnage. In addition, other unspecified conditions would have to have been met to keep Hecla interested in the possible purchase, the president said. "We have now concluded that the conditions prerequisite to successful negotiations are unlikely to be met," Griffith said, "and have informed Gulf Resources (Bunker Hill's parent company) and others concerned that we have no further interest in the matter."

He said Hecla has already located other smelters which are willing to buy the firm's lead and zinc concentrates, and does not anticipate any interruption of its concentrates business as a result of the possible closing of Bunker Hill.

Redford says institute will open next fall

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — Actor-environmentalist Robert Redford admitted Friday he's had trouble raising money for his Institute for Resource Management, a graduate fellowship program postponed a year by funding problems.

Redford said in a speech to 5,000 persons at Washington State University the institute was culmination of a six-year dream to "bridge the gap between what's going to be developed and what's going to be preserved."

The institute, which will provide 20 fellowships annually for masters degree candidates at WSU and the University of Idaho, has postponed its start twice because it failed to obtain a $300,000 loan needed to get started.

During his appearance at WSU, the actor did little to shed light on whether enough money has been raised to actually begin the program next fall — but he vowed the third startup date would be kept.

It was originally announced $300,000 in seed money and fund-raising of $6 million would be needed to permanently endow the institute.

At a news conference, Redford was pressed about how much had been raised and specifics on commitments from the public and private sectors, but said only that "fund-raising has been more difficult than expected" because of Reagan administration cutbacks and the economy.

"The program has been delayed because I was too ambitious and wanted to get it going sooner than it should," said Redford. "The program will be launched next fall."

Student leaders use ads to fight alcohol problems

BOISE (UPI) — Student leaders at Idaho colleges have backed their plea for on-campus beer and wine sales by promoting "alcohol awareness."

Heads of student organizations at some of Idaho's colleges will ask the state Education Board next week to permit the sale of beer and wine on campus — particularly at football games and catered events in student union buildings. Current board rules prohibit the consumption of alcohol on campus, except by those 19 or older — and only in their dormitory rooms.

Tony Lund, Boise State University student president, said the alcohol-awareness program would be carried on even if the board rejected the students' request.

Lund said the BSU student government already has formed an Alcohol Awareness on Campus Committee to work on the package plan. He said the program would include distribution of posters that emphasize "responsible" drinking and discourage drinking and driving.

The committee also has produced public-service announcements against drinking and driving and has distributed them to commercial and campus radio stations in Boise, Pocatello and Moscow, Lund said.

Funds for security of state officials may be requested

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Law Enforcement Department may ask the Legislature to boost the agency's ability to protect the governor and other elected state officials.

Idaho is one of a handful of states without a special program to shield the governor from violence, said John Rooney, acting director of the department. He said better protection probably is warranted. Governor John Evans' unoccupied state-owned car was damaged by a Molotov cocktail in 1978, and armed men burst into his son's Burley home last May, briefly kidnapping John Evans Jr.

It has cost an estimated $30,000 to provide protection for Evans in the last 10 months, Rooney said. The money was not an additional sum spent by the Law Enforcement Department, but merely represented a manpower shift from the Bureau of Investigations staff.

Rooney said the department budget planners were considering whether to ask the 1982 Legislature to appropriate funds specifically for the protection of the governor — and other state elected officials who occasionally require bodyguards.

Sen. Dean Van Engelen, R-Burley, a senior member of the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, said he was "open to suggestions" concerning the possible appropriation.

"I'd really have to look into it to see if it's needed," Van Engelen said. "If it's needed, I'd have to look into it. It's just a matter of trying to find twenty or thirty thousand more dollars, maybe not."

Van Engelen said he thought the Bureau of Investigations budget was sufficient to handle the security detail as well as its normal duties, "but I really haven't looked into it."

Security for Evans was increased last December in the wake of the fatal shooting of ex-Beatle John Lennon. Subsequent attacks against President Reagan and Pope John Paul II were followed by additional security measures for the governor. Late last month, another Bureau of Investigations employee was assigned to the governor's security detail.

Rooney said one security man usually is with Evans throughout a routine business day and additional officers are assigned when the governor attends official functions or travels out of state. Normally, no state investigators are assigned to the detail when Evans is at home or traveling on private business, Rooney said.

"With the increasing threats and terrorism, there's an increasing emphasis on security," Rooney said.

Idaho, Wyoming and Montana are the only states which have not yet instituted a "complete" security operation for their chief executives, Rooney said. He said the protection of Evans has been "continuous" during his official duties since late last year, but it possibly could be upgraded.

Richard Cade, chief of the Bureau of Investigations, supervises the governor's security detail in addition to his regular duties, Rooney said. Allocating more money to the bureau — and earmarking it for executive protection — would allow Cade and the few employees assigned to the detail to devote more time to other jobs, he said.

"Idaho is becoming a big state, a growth-up state, and with the increasing population and crime, there are more of those who prey upon good people," Rooney said.

He said Idahoans and their elected officials still have "a little too much of a rural attitude." He said state officials now must realize they often should fear for their safety.

New food stamp rules mean fewer eligible

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Health and Welfare Department officials said it will be more difficult to obtain food stamps in Idaho because of newly mandated changes in the program's eligibility requirements.

The changes, which go into effect Nov. 1, were required by legislation approved by Congress in September. Idaho was given a one-month delay in implementing the new rules to allow state officials sufficient time to complete rule changes required in other welfare programs.

A household with a gross income of more than 130 percent of the federal poverty level won't be eligible for food stamps under the new rules, officials said. For example, a two-person household can't have more than a $67 gross income per month to obtain the food assistance, they said.

But households with elderly inhabitants — or the blind and disabled — are excluded from the so-called 130-percent rule, they said. In such cases the net monthly income will be compared to the poverty guidelines, with a two-member household limited to a net income of $175 per month.

The new rules also bar strikers from obtaining food stamps unless the household was eligible to receive them before the strike. Monthly income received before a strike will be counted in figuring food stamp eligibility even if the income is not being received during the strike, they said.

Students cannot receive food assistance under the new rules unless they are enrolled in a college or university that requires a high school diploma — or an equivalency certificate — for enrollment.

The new rules also reduce to 18 percent the amount of expenses that may be deducted from earned income. A 20-percent rule has been used in the past, they said.

Boards also will no longer be eligible to participate in the Food Stamp program either as household members or as a separate household. And a group consisting of parents and children must be treated as a single household, unless one parent is 60 years old or older.

Beginning in December, a household applying for the first time will have their food stamp allotment prorated from the date of application. This replaces rules that have allowed a full month of benefits in the first allotment.

Gleaning program highlights state's Food Day programs

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Hunger Action Council's gleaning program was highlighted today in World Food Day programs across the state.

The international celebration sponsored by the 147 member nations of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations was designed to alert the public to problems of malnutrition.

Idaho's non-profit council — designed to coordinate anti-hunger activities in the state — organized the statewide gleaning project with a $7,000 grant from the Presiding Bishop's Fund of the Episcopal Church.

Gleaning is the process of harvesting fresh fruits and vegetables left after the regular harvest in orchards, fields and backyard gardens. The council then distributes the food to low-income families.

Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston, discussed hunger in Idaho during a ceremony at the governor's Statehouse office, while Bob Jensen of the Idaho Health and Welfare Department also spoke in support of the gleaning program.

In Jerome, Linda Cunningham, local gleaning coordinator, met with Mayor Marshall Everheart in a ceremony, while Coeur d'Alene gleaning coordinator Brenda Whitte also met with Mayor Don Johnson.

Eloise Nolen, gleaning coordinator in Boise, served a "gleaned food banquet" at the Riverside Center and met with Mayor Dick Eardley to explain the program.

"One-fifth of all food produced in the United States for consumption is lost annually — approximately 137 million tons of food worth $31 billion," the council said in its publication concerning gleaning. "It is estimated that 1.6 million tons of food is wasted in Idaho" yearly.

"This food waste is not the food scraped into the garbage disposal after a meal," the council publication said. "This food never reaches the table. It is food discarded or left in the field due to appearance, size, over-supply, lack of profit potential or the constraints of large harvesting machines."

Individuals who contribute such food may claim deductions on their federal income-tax statements, council officials said, and are not liable for injuries that might result from the condition of the food.

Man takes hostage into bank to rob it

BOISE (UPI) — Police scoured neighborhoods bordering Broadway Avenue Friday searching for a man who took a female hostage into a Citizens National Bank, then released his captive after robbing the financial institution with a shotgun.

Police said the woman appeared to be in good condition, although she was visibly upset by the experience.
